Joint Flight Big Step

Primary Gains May Be Political

By John Hamer

Washington — Shortly after noon (EDT) on Thursday, about 135 miles above Europe, a silver, bullet-shaped American Apoilo spacecraft maneuver slowly toward a green and white Russian Soyuz capsule with a bulbous nose and a pair of wings.

The Apollo will push a black docking module toward the Soyuz and a metal ring will lock into a series of latching devices and pressure seals. When docking is completed, a hatch will open and astronauts Thomas Stafford and Donald (Deke) Slayton, weightless in space, will crawl into the docking module while Vance Brand remains in the command module.

Sometime after 3 p.m., the Soyuz hatch will open and Stafford will reach out to shake the hands of Soviet cosmonauts Alexei Leonov and Valeriy Kubasov — if all goes according to schedule from Tuesday, the launch day.

The historic handshakes will be seen live by a worldwide television audience, which also will hear the astronauts address the cosmonauts in their native language and vice versa — "language of the listener" is the rule for the mission.

The crews will exchange flags and sign a joint flight certificate. Later, the Russians will serve their American guests a luncheon of sour cabbage soup, jellied tongue, dried fish, rye bread, cream cheese with black currant jam, honey cakes, prunes with nuts, tea and candy — all from aluminum tubes and tin cans.

Thus will begin the Apollo-Soyuz Test Project — the first international manned space flight in history. It is an undertaking which many believe will open a new era of international cooperation in space. If humanity is ever to venture out through the solar system into the galaxy and beyond, it clearly must be combined effort of more than one nation.

"Somewhere along the line in space programs, we have to start doing a lot of work with other nations, basically to economize," astronaut Brand has said. "I think that it's important that we make this first step in cooperation."

The main purpose of the Apollo-Soyuz mission is to test the new international docking system. Built at a cost of about $25 million, the mechanism combines the best engineering ideas of the two nations to build a system better than either had before. In the future, any two vehicles with the new unit will be able to dock at any time, whether in routine or emergency situations.

The primary gains from the joint mission probably will be political, however. U.S. and Soviet personnel already have worked together on it for several years in greater harmony than either side expected.

The flight crews seemed to hit it off almost from the beginning of their lengthy training programs, developing what a U.S. space agency official called "the camaraderie of World War I fighter pilots."

Taking four to six hours a day of Russian or English lessons for more than a year, the astronauts and cosmonauts are now able to communicate fluently. "We must trust each other with our lives, therefore we must be like a family," Soyuz Commander

Leonov has said. The mission was threatened at one point when Soviet officials refused to allow the U.S. crew to visit the launch site in Russia and go aboard the Soyuz spacecraft, contending that it was also a military missile base. But Apollo Commander Stafford, an Air Force brigadier general, insisted on a tour, declaring: "I never fly on a spacecraft I haven't been in on the ground." The Russians gave in and arranged a tour in April and May.

Critics of the joint mission argue that it is a meaningless "handshake in space," a "wheat deal in the sky" with the Russians likely to reap all the technological benefits, or that it might endanger the lives of U.S. astronauts. American space officials generally agree that the Soviet program is about a decade behind the U.S. program, but they insist that the mission is as safe as the two nations' experts can make it.

Future space missions probably will involve even more international cooperation.

A consortium of European companies is now building Spacelab, an orbiting laboratory designed to be rocketed into space in 1980 aboard the new U.S. Space Shuttle, a reusable orbiter. American and Soviet officials are discussing further joint manned flights in the 1980s.

Meanwhile, both nations are exploring the planets of the solar system with unmanned flights. The Soviet Union launched Venus 9 and 10 in June, and one or both are expected to land on the cloud-covered planet in October. The U.S. next month will launch two Viking spacecraft intended to land on Mars in July 1976 and search for

The possibility that intelligent life exists elsewhere in the universe is considered one of the primary motivations of the space program. Capt. Robert Freitag, deputy director of advanced programs in the space agency's Office of Manned Space Flight, has said: "Today, many scientists - if not the majority - agree that extraterrestrial life surely must exist and possibly in enormous abundance."

Whether or not human beings ever come in contact with life beyond the earth, the urge to explore outer space seems likely to remain strong. Many people believe that space travel is part of human destiny. If so, the Apollo-Soyuz Test Project may be yet another giant step for mankind.

Launches

From News Wires Cape Canaveral, Fla. - Russia sent its Soyuz to the launch pad Saturday and America's cool Apollo Commander Thomas Stafford landed at the spaceport in a thunderstorm proclaiming, "We're in great shape and ready to go" on Tuesday's U.S.-Soviet rendezvous blastoffs.

"I hope we have all the bad weather today. Hope it's not like this next Tuesday," Stafford said after he zoomed into Patrick Air Force Base at 4:40 p.m. EDT through a thick layer of black storm clouds. Rain pattered on his baid head and soaked his yellow flight suit as he talked briefly to newsmen.

Fellow astronauts Vance Brand and Donald (Deke) Slayton left the Johnson Space Center at Houston in other T38 jet trainers after Stafford to fly to the launch

At the Soviet cosmodrome at Baikonur in the central Asian desert, cosmonauts Alexei Leonov, a miner's son and colonel in the Red Air Force, and space companion Valeriy Kubasov, a civilian engineer, were reported in "excellent spirits" as they rehearsed parts of their flight schedule.

Everything was going smoothly in both countries. Even the weather, which has plagued the U.S. launch site here with lightning and gale force wind gusts for a week, showed signs of improving. The long-range forecast for Apollo's 2:50 p.m.

CDT takeoff target was for partly cloudy skies and only scattered thunderstorms in the launch area.

Prof. Konstantin Bushuvev, Russia's technical director, reported everything was on schedule in preparing the Soyuz spacecraft and its booster rocket. A huge erector raised the 162-foot space machine vertically for flight.

At the launch site here, all was in readiness for start of the final Saturn-Apollo countdown at 9:30 a.m. today.

The Russians will start the unprecedented space show with an 7:20 a.m. CDT takeoff on Tuesday. Stafford, Brand and Slayton are due to liftoff from this spaceport 8,670 miles away 71/2 hours later.

Launch rules, tightened after Apollo 12 was hit twice by lightning as it lifted off, call for a postponement if there is lightning potential in the area, or winds high enough to shove the rocket off course. If necessary, the Apollo can lift off 5 minutes, 24 seconds early and up to 8 minutes late and still keep its rendezvous with the orbiting Soyuz. Should the launch be postponed for any reason, the rendezvous still can be accomplished with liftoffs on four succeeding days. And the Russians have a backup ship and crew ready to give Apollo a second

Americans May Man Watches at Sinai Passes

London - The United States, seeking to facilitate a new disengagement agreement between Israel and Egypt, is considering the possibility of having American technicians man electronic surveillance stations in the strategic Sinai passes, reporters traveling with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger were told Saturday.

This emerged after Kissinger had discussed the prospects of a new agreement for more than three hours near Bonn Saturday with Premier Yitzhak Rabin of Israel. The secretary later flew to London for brief talks with Britain's foreign secretary, James Callaghan, before returning to ficulties" would have to be overcome. Asked what the difficulties were, he smiled and refused to elaborate.

During the flight from Bonn, newsmen on the Kissinger plane were told differences remain to be resolved on the precise location of the new cease-fire line in the Sinai, on Egyptian access to the oilfield at Abu Rudeis, and on corollary American assurances of economic and political support for Israel.

Considerable progress has been made in clarifying issues in dispute in the last few weeks, the reporters were told, but it was still not certain whether a new agreement could be achieved.

One of the issues still outstanding is Israel's demand to retain the use of the sophisticated early-warning radar and monitoring stations it currently maintains in the Gidi Pass. These stations provide Israel with electronic surveillance of the western slopes of the Gidi and Mitla passes and the terrain stretching west toward the Suez Canal.

Egypt has rejected the Israeli demand to retain control of the stations and has apparently suggested, as a compromise, the U.S. man them instead. Although reluctant to have Americans juxtaposed between the two sides, the U.S. reluctantly agreed to consider it, officials said Saturday.

Newsmen were told the idea was being discussed with both Israel and Egypt but that, contrary to recent press reports, no decision had been reached. It was not clear how many Americans might be involved, what their status and function would be, or whether Israel might drop her objections to the idea and finally agree to it.

It was stressed, however, there was no discussion of positioning American troops in Sinai or assuming an active policing role. "We're not that crazy," an American official said Saturday. "But in the manning of the stations proves to be a crucial point in reaching an agreement, we will consider Israel and Egypt still have not agreed on a new cease-fire line, newsmen were told.

Israel has offered to withdraw from most of the Sinai passes but wants to retain at least a blocking presence in the eastern

The current negotiating effort is to find a compromise line that Egypt can construe as a complete Israeli evacuation of the passes, and Israel can construe as a satisfactory foothold. American officials are persuaded, however, this issue is more a question of political prestige than military security, and can be resolved if the other disputed points are settled.

At the same time, Ford said at a news conference here, "We are alert to too big a sale or too big a shipment overseas because the American consumer has a stake in

Ford said he hoped farm production in this country this year would be large enough to take care of export demand so that grain sales to Russia would have no ill effect on the domestic economy.

A Russian purchase in 1972 of about 19 million tons of American grain helped spur increases in retail food prices of about 14.5% over each of the next two years. "We are watching all aspects of this problem," the President said. Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz, in testimony Friday before the Senate Agriculture Committee, said U.S. grain traders are negotiating in Moscow but that he felt the impending sale would have little effect on U.S. consumers.

Developing a theme that has emerged in her other statements over the last few days. Mrs Gandhi stressed the need for a strong central government because a weak center, as she said Friday, "cannot hold together" a country as vast and diverse as India.

Mrs. Gandhi, who has suffered her greatest defeats at the hands of the Indian judicial system, goes to the Supreme Court on Monday to try to everturn a conviction that has plunged the nation into its worst constitutional crisis since independence in

The court's immediate task is to rule whether Mrs. Gandhi was wrongfully convicted last month of violating election laws when she won her Parliament seat in 1971 - an offense punished by an automatic ban on holding elective office for six years.

It is generally acknowledged the Supreme Court's ruling may influence not only Mrs. Gandhi's political fate but the future of India's democratic structures.

In a regionally televised news conference, Ford said he would go along with an extension of the present price control law, which expires Aug. 31, as long as it gave him some flexibility. But he made clear he would view such an extension as a temporary expedient.

About 60% of America's domestic oil production is considered "old oil," produced from wells that were drilled before 1972, and sells for a controlled price of $5.25 a barrel. Removing price controls would let oil from such wells be sold at the world market price, now about $13 a barrel.

Here Come Higher Levies

For some time, the prospect of a fairly jolting property tax increase this year has been visible, if only one was willing to look. Now that prospect is taking a form easier to

In Lincoln, judging from stories elsewhere in today's newspaper, plus information previously printed, an increase of perhaps 10 to 12 mills would not be super startling.

Both the city and county governments are talking in terms of going up maybe 3 mills each; the Lincoln school board officially projects a property tax rise of at least that; the community technical college district has newly-enlarged property taxing powers. And so it goes.

What would such an increase mean?

For those living in a house having an assessor-certified actual value of $20,000, a levy jump of 12 mills translates into a yearly property tax bill higher by $84. Or, if you are making mortgage payments, probably something like $10 a month more.

Stack that along side a pair of almost certain increases in electric rates, an expected Moost in telephone rates and, very likely, higher natural gas rates and . . . well, that has all the makings for a purse-pinched, grimfaced audience.

Austerity is a word government officials will be hearing in massed choruses very soon, perhaps commencing with the school district's public budget hearing Thursday evening.

Surveying the state, property tax levy increases soon should bloom like musk thistle everywhere. When the state's property tax base rises only 3.3% and projected expenses are several times greater, only one result is possible - if local jurisdictions are not already at constitutional or statutory mill levy

That property tax values ought to keep pace with inflation seems to be as foreign a course of government action in Nebraska as swearing loyalty to the Communist Party.

In that connection, spare a jot of sympathy for Merrick County property owners.

Merrick apparently is the only county to put a fresh tax reappraisal on the books for the 1975 tax year.

According to state records, Merrick County's real estate valuations, for tax purposes, are 51% higher this year, than last.

So in situations where Merrick land is wholly within or part of multi-county taxing districts - such as overlapping school districts, educational service units, natural resource districts, community technical college districts, etc. — a mill levy uniform over valuation-static counties means Merrick land owners must bear a disproportionately greater share of the tax burden.

If some Merrick taxpayer decides such a state of affairs just isn't right and appeals to the courts for relief, that, too, should surprise police, who argue that their hazardous duty, with tough physical requirements, mandates early retirement at generous benefit levels. In Oakland, Calif., for instance, a firefighter earning over $16,-000 a year can now retire at 46 after 25 years' service and receive 55% of his final pay in pension. And then he can go out and get another full-paying job for another 10 or 20 productive life years.

The trend toward half-pay after 20 or 25 years, begun in New York, has spread rapidly across the country. Municipal finance expert Philip Dearborn observes that when such workers start second careers, society is really paying them 150% to 200% of their real economic worth — a hard-to-justify luxury in an era of scarce public and private Public officials often aid and abet pension abuses. At the bargaining table, it's much easier for a mayor to grant pension benefits, which won't come due until long after he's left office, than to risk voter retaliation by agreeing to pay hikes that will have to be paid out of today's taxes. Local officials also let themselves be victimized by union whip-saw tactics, first granting high benefits for police or fire, then succumbing to pressures to grant comparable pensions for other groups of workers.

Excessive pension benefits add up, literally, to mortgaging the future. Today's politicians make the arrangements, but it's tomorrow's officeholders (and taxpayers) who will have to foot the bill. The public would benefit if excessive pension benefits could be revoked, but unfortunately they are a type of contract virtually irrevocable under law.

There are more than 2,300 state and local government pension systems in the country, covering 9.1 million workers. They are typically small, without a sufficiently broad base to afford professional management.

Finally, many state-local government pension systems let a worker draw full Social Security benefits, in addition to his pension - in sharp contrast to the money-saving practice of most private industry pension plans, which mesh the two income sources for retirees.

What can be done to rescue the state and local pension funds from their morass?

Several states have centralized administration of several systems or consolidated their assets. The most comprehensive reform has occurred in South Dakota, which has established one state retirement system which replaces several former state or local

The result is a uniform public pension policy that eliminates "leap-frogging" by separate systems, reduces operating costs, and has a potential for higher return.

Another reform that hard-pressed cities should consider is providing second careers for police and firemen who have completed 20 or 25 years of service and are technically "too old" or "disabled" for their former jobs. Instead, they could well be transferred to nonhazardous dispatcher or instructor jobs in their old departments or assigned to other city jobs where a 45-to-65 year old is fully qualified, ranging from building or zoning inspector to playground administrator.

Such an approach, according to Edward Friend of the Society of Actuaries, would save on payroll costs, reduce pension costs and "give retirees an active life and a feeling of usefulness and continued service to the community."

Unfortunately, that type of creative thinking is all too rare today.

Nixon Years: An Ex-Nebraskan's Inside View

Q. What were your expectations in coming (to Washington)? A. Well, I really didn't know. Most of the people I had talked to told me that I could just forget about my personal life and family life and sort of be married to the White House for a period of years, however long it lasted. That turned out to be true. I had some other advice that stood me very well. I think. And that was, from that time forward I could never get mad and if I did, I couldn't show it, because it would be harmful to me in what I was trying to do, and I think that was good advice.

Q. You probably have a temper down there somewhere.

A. Of course I do, of course I do. I think that was good advice and I think it helped me because throughout all this, there had to be - according to my philosophy or theory — there had to be an avenue of communication regardless . . . there had to be a way to get an answer to a question. The answer oftentimes did not please the questioner, but at least the apparatus was intact . . .

Q. Was there a feeling within the Nixon White House that the press was an enemy, something to be fended

A. I think that's a little harsh. I do think, however, because so many people working for Mr. Nixon had convinced themselves of his innocence, they felt it was still — to quote the line of the day - the steady drumbeat of reports, of speculation, of innuendo, sourced material - they felt - they took that personally, because they were not only working with Mr. Nixon but for him and he was their leader. And so they felt that this was unfair. That led to a suspicious, at best, relationship.

Q. Was there any sort of animosity before the Watergate incident?

A. There was no honeymoon between Mr. Nixon and the press. He was well reported and favorably so early in his administration. I think the campaign of 1968 was fairly reported and he was more accessible then . . . but the enmity that was felt between - and I have to say it was mutual on both sides — certain reporters and Mr. Nixon was clear. It was clear from the start. I think the bunker philosophy really set in during the days of the student demonstrations.

Q. You must have had some mixed

A. Of course I did. And I learned

Gerald Warren, a native of Hastings and a graduate of the University of Nebraska, is ending six and a half years of White House service as assistant press secretary, first under President Nixon and now under President Ford. These are excerpts from an interview conducted by United Press International before Warren returns to the San Diego Union, where he will become editor.

early in my newspaper career never to generalize about the press and that became a very important philosophy . . . Selectively I could maintain my rapport with individual reporters. even those I felt might be a little bit unfair from time to time. But I never felt they should stop reporting what they were reporting. It had to be reported. It was there. The students were marching around the White House at this period and the White House was ringed with buses.

Q. Did you also sense or see hostility on the side of the press, a taking for granted that evil was there in the White House?

A. Yes, yes, I did, and that gained momentum toward the end of the Watergate period because most everybody in town was playing catchup ball, trying to catch up with the Washington Post . . .

That led to what I call one portion of the Watergate syndrome, which is a rush to print, and it hurt guys in your business . . . They would hear what was obviously a rumor and they received it on a sources basis rather than quotation basis. And the tendency was in certain cases — I don't mean this as a blanket indictment — but in certain cases the tendency was to put it on the wire first, then check it out because if you didn't put it on the wire first, and it was true, then someone else might beat you to it . . .

Q. Did you know Nixon before you came to the White House? A. No, I didn't know him socially or anything like that.

Q. Did you get to know him in the White Bouse? A. I really didn't.

Q. Was be a leaser? A. I think he is. We never had a chance just to sit down and talk about philosophy or approach to government ... I can speak only for myself — he would talk to me in a way he would to a staff meeting. He was more formal. he was making his points, what he wanted to stress. It was that type of relationship. Toward the end, the last few weeks, I saw him rarely.

Q. Nixon kept a distance between himself and his aides? A. Yes, he did.

Q. Why?

A. I think it might be habit more than anything else. He was not a man who liked to use luncheons or breakfasts for business purposes. He would do it at breakfast because it was sort of traditional with the hill, the leaders. But he would only do it with the top leaders, the big five as he called them, the three leaders from the House and the two leaders from the Senate, on either side . . .

Q. Did he show much interest in the press? A. Yes.

Q. There were conflicting reports whether he read many or no papers. A. Well, he read newspapers. I don't think he was the type of newspaper reader that Mr. Ford is who will take a newspaper and read it from one end to the other. I think Mr. Nixon was a selective reader. He went to the guts of the issue of the day and found out what people were saying about that, He did not read every newspaper that was at his doorstep . . . As far as him turning himself off from reality, that's always been strange to me because in the first term I thought he was reading the mood of this country very well . . . (but) there is no question that as we moved into the Watergate phase of his term here that there was a desire to believe one thing and that was what we were saying in the White House rather than what was being said by the

Q. You mean he believed what he wanted to believe?

A. We did, around him. And I am sure because of that, the staff advice to him had to be colored a little bit by that desire to believe him innocent and to work to prove it . . .

Q. Now that you are leaving the White House after 6 1-2 years, do you regret having come?

A. Not at all. Not at all. No. It's silly to say, I know, but I think that if someone were to say to me, "All right, Warren, we want you to go to the White House and while you're there you're going to have bricks thrown at you every day and the man you are working for and the man you admire is going to have to resign in disgrace, but we want you to go and get this experience anyway," I think I'd do it. I think I'd do it.

There's nothing more important to me in this form of government of ours than to bring in citizens and sort of flush out the system every four years or six years or eight years, bring new people in and let some of us who have been here a while go back out and use our experience in our chosen fields.

Q. Did Nixon, on ordering the coverup as shown in the June 23 tape. know what he was doing? He didn't know what he was doing?

A. I believe that. I don't know, I obviously have not talked to him about that. Maybe that's one thing we'll learn when Mr. Nixon does his book. I hope so. I don't believe he knew what he was doing would be viewed as an obstruction of justice, a thwarting of our system or anything like that. I can't give you any theories on what he thought he was doing or why, but I don't think he knew the impact.

Cooperation in Space, Competition on Earth By William R. Frye

United Nations - This week the United States and Soviet Union symbolize detente by a space spectacular: a linkup of orbiting Soviet and American space vehicles.

Almost from the beginning of the space age, there were proposed joint Soviet-American ventures in space - for their own sake, to save money, to generate a habit of East-West cooperation.

"Let us go to the moon together," President Kennedy said to the Russians, hoping competition on earth would also be eased or abandoned.

Now that the first joint Soviet-U.S. mission is about to take place, the theory of beneficial terrestrial spin-off is under serious question. This week's spectacular will certainly warm the atmosphere of Soviet-U.S. relations, but it is not atmospherics which most need improving. To too great a degree. detente is already atmosphere without meaningful substance.

What is missing is progress on real issues which have kept Moscow and Washington in a state of competitive and sometimes antagonistic rivalry. That was the challenge which awaited Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko last week in Geneva.

The East-West detente they were assigned to strengthen had all the obvious weak spots: strategic arms limitation, the Mideast, Portugal, trade and emigration, European security. It also had a number of irritants not so immediately apparent. Among the latter were:

The Indian Ocean. With missile facilities in Somalia substantially confirmed, the Soviet Union now can project its sea power much more effectively around a giant arc from Vladivostok to the Red Sea.

If — as China has charged similar facilities may shortly be available to Moscow at Cam Ranh Bay in South Vietnam, the Soviet fleet will soon be able to challenge Western dominance of both the Pacific and Indian Oceans.

The Suez Canal being open, there is mobility between the Indian Ocean and Mediterranean Sea. If Portugese facilities too are put fully at Moscow's disposal, the challenge to Western sea power can be made effective through an entire open-mouthed circle from Vladivostok to Leningrad.

In an era when nuclear missile submarines form a major segment of a great power's strategic weaponry, control of sea lanes is close to the heart of national security. It is also close to the sinews of economic power, since Persian Gulf oil passes through these same lanes.

Korea. Another land war in Asia, backed by Moscow, would shatter detente in a thousand pieces. If the Kremlin is restraining North Korea's ambitious President Kim II Sung, it would be a distinct contribution to eased tension. Kim has, in fact, begun talking again of expanded peaceful contacts with the South.

The United Nations. Another opportunity for useful Soviet-U.S. parallelism will arise in September when the third-world majority of the U.N. General Assembly climaxes a campaign of pressure for a "new world economic order." The assembly majority may also seek to disaccredit Israeli delegates.

Similar diplomatic offensives in the past have had all-out Soviet (and Chinese) backing. They have met and will meet intense U.S. resistance. It would be a contribution to detente if Moscow were to decide that, instead of helping inflame passions, it could push for restraint and compromise.

There are plenty of other places, as well, on the periphery of Soviet-U.S. relations where detente could be given real substance, if meaningful progress is not yet feasible on core issues. Laos is one.

Instead, the prospect would seem to be for a dramatic exercise in hands-across-outer-space, setting an admirable example for men on earth which is not likely to be followed.

Platte River Basin Level B Study:

Much has been said about too much planning - and not enough action. But if complete planning, including the input of citizens affected, is not carried out...then timely action often is not taken or, if attained, may not be well conceived.

This study of water resources in the Platte River Basin is a joint effort of State and Federal agencies to be completed in July, 1975.

The study was initiated in the spring of 1972 at the request of the State of Nebraska. Recommendations contained in Nebraska's State Water Plan Framework Study and a separate study of the entire Missouri River drainage area called for more intensive study of the Platte River Basin in Nebraska because of the many existing water resource issues and potential problems with continuing development. Overall, the objective of the study is to prepare a comprehensive plan for water and related land resource management in the area - focusing on a period 15 to 30 years in the future, but also identifying problems and possible solutions to the year 2020

To the extent possible, the plan and recommendations presented on these pages represent the combined thinking of Federal. State, and local agencies - together with that of citizen advisory committees and the general public - as to what actions should be taken in future resources management for the basin.

The study area consists of 40,800 square miles - approximately 53 percent of the State's land area. It is home for more than 600,000 people, or 43 percent of the State's population. For study purposes, the Platte River Basin was divided into four subbasins: the Elkhorn, the Loup, and the Upper and Lower Plattes. Federal guidelines were followed in the preparation of plans, which emphasized two major planning objectives - National Economic Development, which requires evaluation of plan effects in monetary terms; and Environmental Quality which stresses preservation or improvement of the natural environment of the area.

The following broad planning goals were set in consultation with citizen groups and through public surveys

... Reduce damages from flooding and high water tables

... Stabilize economy through agricultural and recreational development

... Provide outdoor recreation opportunities

. Satisfy municipal and industrial water demands

... Satisfy rural domestic and livestock water demands

Provide opportunities for enhancing fish and wildlife Meet water quality standards

Provide conservation and sediment control measures Maintain or enhance environmental quality

Although subjected to preliminary economic analysis, the absolute feasibility of any project or program included in this plan has not been determined. Final detailed analyses and implementation must come through designated public agencies, elected bodies and citizen groups in related but separate actions. The plan will identify those projects and programs which could be acted on immediately, and those which should have further study.

Conflicts between developmental and environmental values of the resources are apparent, they came early among study members, as well as among participants at public meetings held throughout the study period. Choices and compromises were necessary and are included in the draft plan presented here.

Elements of the Plan have been divided into two parts for presentation: 1 Structural - Those projects or programs that have physical features or construction works. Their locations are shown on the map and briefly described below the map. 2. Legal and Institutional - Suggested new laws or policies or changes in laws, policies, or institutional arrangements to further the accomplishment of water and related land resource management objectives. Generally these would apply not only to the Platte River Basin but to the entire State of Nebraska.

Changing conditions and needs undoubtedly will suggest other actions in years to come. Plans are prepared to be used as guides based on what we know today. If and when social, economic, technical, and other factors change, there will be need to update and revise the plan. Whether or not any or all of the plan elements and recommendations are carried out depends on the citizens of this State and their governmental agencies.

Public meetings have been scheduled to review the plan and recommendations in more detail. Locations and times are given in another section of this repor

Future Conditions Without A Plan

In order to determine where emphasis on water management should be placed, it is necessary to estimate what future conditions would be without a plan. This estimate is based on assumptions that existing laws, policies and programs affecting water resources will continue in the future with little change. No attempt was made to predict those major technological or sociological changes which may take place. The "Without Plan" conditions are used as a baseline to measure accomplishments of the proposed plan.

FLOOD DAMAGE-Damages from floods will continue to increase. It was assumed that future development in urban floodplains would be restricted by enforcement of Nebraska's floodplain regulation law, but increasing damages in non-urban areas may offset this. Even with implementation of flood plain regulation in urban areas, flood damages in the Platte Basin are expected to increase from about $20 million dollars annually in 1974 to $38 mil-

EROSION CONTROL - Soil erosion will not be reduced to acceptable levels in the next 50 years with continuation of existing programs. Of the 26 million acres in the Platte River Basin, approximately nine million have adequate land conservation treatment now, an additional 11 million acres can be treated under continuing programs by 2020, leaving six million acres still needing treatment.

WATER QUALITY-It appears that existing programs will bring stream pollution from "point spurces" (where any specific pipe or ditch adds contamination from towns or factories under control by about 1985. However, the problem of eliminating "nonpoint sources of pollution (runoff from large land areas, both rural and urban) remains unsolved. Until this problem can be mastered we must expect increasing deterioration in both surface and ground water quality. Sediment resulting from land erosion is the major "nonpoint" contributor to stream pollution, since it serves as a carrier for salts, organic compounds and agricultural chemicals. AGRICULTURAL WATER - Rural domestic and livestock water supplies will be adequate in the future throughout the Platte River Basin. In some isolated areas where quantity or quality is a problem, rural water systems can supply the need. There are about six million acres in the Platte Basin suitable for irrigation but not presently irrigated. Projections of future irrigation from wells indicate a likely range of development will be somewhere between 1.5 and three million additional acres by the year 2020. Either amount will lower water levels in some areas and significantly reduce streamflow. Competitive demands for remaining flows are sure to ensue; the people of Nebraska face difficult choices in setting priorities between agricultural and environmental interests. FISH AND WILDLIFE - More intensive agricultural development, development of marginal crop lands and urban expansion will decrease available wildlife habitat in the future. Depleted streamflow in some areas will reduce fish habitat. Without future provisions, projected demand indicates ongoing programs will be drastically inadequate. OUTDOOR RECREATION - Present programs can provide adequately for some types of outdoor recreation, but there will be a need (expecially in the eastern part of the Basin) for additional surface water areas, stream-associated recreation activities and water-based recreation. This need will become more severe as population increases. MUNICIPAL AND INDUSTRIAL WATER - Supplies are presently adequate throughout the Basin. In general, this will continue in the future since all supplies are from wells and ample aquifers. However, cities in the central and eastern portion of the Basin have well fields adjacent to the Platte River which are dependent to a large degree on Platte River recharge. Expected reductions in streamflow should not adversely affect the general adequacy, but affect well production and water quality in extreme drought periods. ELECTRIC POWER - Future "Without Plan" projections of electric power requirements indicate there will be adequate water available for power plant cooling purposes in the Loup River system and in the mainstem Platte River below Columbus. There should be no need for major water storage for this purpose. There is virtually no opportunity for development of additional hydroelectric power in the Basin

Land Conservation Measures - To reduce soit erosion and improve water quality, 980,000 acres will require an acceleration in conservation measures.

Legal, Institutional and Policy Plan Elements The Legislature and people of the State of Nebraska should—

1. Recognize the interrelationship between ground and surface waters and consider dedicating the use of all waters of the State to the people for beneficial use.

2. Integrate the regulation of ground and surface waters.

3. Declare stream flows for recreation, fish and wildlife to be a beneficial use in the public

4. Establish a protected stream system providing for: (a) natural streams where the natural flow is maintained; (b) scenic or pastoral streams where the baseflow is maintained; and

(c) recreational streams where a specified minimum flow is maintained. All flows would be for the purposes of maintaining environmental and recreational values.

5. Provide for better land resource management by: (a) formulating state land use policy; (b) coordinating land resource management among agencies; (c) implementing practices to support these policies (local zoning, tax incentives, selective siting, land acquisition to protect significant areas, compile and update land resource data base).

6. Consider legislation to establish guidelines and provide for preservation and enhancement of environmental resources. This would include: (a) preparation of a brief environmental impact statement for proposals not already covered and with potential for significant impact; (b) mitigation of damages to fish and wildlife habitat by any project not now covered by federal law or subject to state funding and causing significant damage; (c) establishment of a regulatory board to review proposed stream channelization which might

Amend flood plain regulation legislation to effect local governmental compliance by removing the requirement for a prior comprehensive plan and assigning the costs of regulation by the State to any community which does not invoke regulation.

The U.S. Congress and/or Federal Departments and agencies should-

1. Amend the Watershed Protection Act (PL 83-566) to remove the restriction on number of recreation sites per watershed and make it consistent with federal Water Projects Recreation Act (PL 89-72) regarding funding.

2. Amend 1936 Flood Control Act to allow federal assistance in land acquisition for recreation and fish and wildlife purposes.

3. Amend 1972 Water Pollution Control Act (PL 92-500) to redefine navigable waters. This should refer to only those waters which are, or can be made, navigable in fact and not based on an arbitrary definition.

Expand the wetlands acquisition and restoration program in order to preserve suitable areas for waterfowl.

5. Expand or reinstall monetary incentive programs such as Soil Bank, Water Bank, and Cropland Adjustment Program to provide additional wildlife habitat.

Federal, State, and local agencies should-

1. Provide programs emphasizing education and research in: (a) environmental effects of actions on ecosystems; (b) effectiveness of measures in reducing erosion and resultant sediment and water quality; (c) proper well construction to minimize danger of water supply contamination; (d) training sessions for sewage treatment plant operators to achieve greater efficiency in operation.

Initiate a ground water quality management program and cooperate in monitoring, analyzing, and safeguarding the domestic and municipal water supplies.

Special Study Recommendations

In addition to those various elements included in the plan, there are additional areas where not enough information and analysis is available to decide upon a specific project or program. Those areas recommended for special study are: (1) A National Recreation Area along the Platte River from the mouth to its confluence with the Loup River and along the Elkhorn River from the mouth to the Dodge-Cuming County line. This could incorporate the recreation corridor, sandpit lakes, and river access nodes included in the plan. It is between the highly populated areas of Omaha. Lincoln, Fremont, and Columbus and initial estimates indicate it may satisfy criteria for a National Recreation Area.

(2) A total water management study in the central Elkhorn Subbasin, specifically including Pierce, Madison, and parts of Antelope, Wayne, and Stanton counties. The Level B Study has shown this to be a future water-short area considering ground water irrigation, surface water irrigation potentials and stream water quality flows. There will also be significant flood damage potential remaining after plan elements are installed. Through further study of this specific area, and considering import of water from outside the Elkhorn Basin, it appears possible that a total water management plan could be devised which would better satisfy the needs.

(3) Ground water monitoring and management in areas with deteriorating water quality is vital, especially the Central Platte area of Buffalo, Hall, and Merrick counties. This study shows that ground water quality is beginning to deteriorate in other parts of the Platte Basin. There is need for an intensified network for monitoring ground water quality and study to determine how to cope with problem areas once they have been defined.

Plan Costs and Evaluations

How much will it cost and who will pay is always a primary question. Following is a summary estimate of costs and accomplishments for the entire Platte River Basin for the structural portion of the Plan.

ESTIMATED PLAN COSTS AND ACCOMPLISHMENTS

Plan Component	Initial Cost ($ Million)	Accomplishment
Flood Control Erosion Control	83 107	Reduce flood damages by $7.3 million annually, or 24% Provide accelerated conservation treatment on 14 million acres, resulting in 2.6 million acres being adequated treated beyond ongoing programs.
Recreation	80	Acquire 32,000 acres of land and water for recreation; provide public access to streams; satisfy 95% of water associated recreation needs.
Fish and Wildlife	9	Protect 12 miles trout stream; 15,000 acre wildlife refuge.
Irrigation	294	Irrigate approximately 200,000 acres.
	TOTAL 573

These costs would, of course, be distributed over a 30 to 50 year period. No cost allocation has been accomplished but major costs would be Federal. State and local with some private funds necessary where services were provided, such as an irrigation project.

It is not possible to estimate the costs of implementing the legal, institutional, and policy elements of the plan since most are administrative in nature.

Remaining Needs

Using today's planning criteria, social values and funding possibilities it is not possible to satisfy all identified needs

It appears that the plan as drafted will satisfy future needs for municipal and industrial water supplies; meeting water quality standards with the exception of some nonpoint source problems; cooling water in electric power plants; most outdoor recreation; erosion control; and fish and wildlife habitat. There will still be remaining flood damages for which no economical solution has been found, insufficient water to irrigate suitable lands and inadequate control of nonpoint source pollution. This plan addresses only the major water resources problems, needs and solutions; mainly from a State and Federal level. There will always be the need for proper water resources planning and management at the local public and private individual levels.

. By Jurate Karickas

East Hampton, N.Y. (AP) ---Clifford Irving, "Con Man of the Year" in 1972, strolls barefoot on the lawn overlooking a sunny inlet of this seaside resort. He affectionately nuzzles a pretty German woman friend and says: "Life is good. It always was."

Fine spirits for a man who a few days later declared himself bankrupt and for one still up to his neck in legal proceedings from the 1972 fracas that erupted from his fake autobiography of billionaire Howard Hughes.

After serving 17 months in Drison on charges of contpiracy and fraud, Irving, 44, moved here last July. He passes the time playing frenetic daily tennis, dining with friends and dabbling at pure fiction - a new novel he describes as an "crotic romance" about three women and man living in the Hamptons.

Clad in tennis shorts, Irving stretched his long legs on a tattered hassock in his rented cottage and reminisced about his caper.

The bulk of that debt, they said, represents a $55 million libel suit pending in U.S. District Court in Manhattan. It was filed by Fernand Legros, an artist who was the subject of an earlier and ironically-titled Irving book called "Fake."

Has all this turned life sour for Irving?

"It's fruitless to worry about the future," he says. "I have always been easy going and irresponsible and things have always worked out."

Labor costs, swelled by costof-living increases, exceeded predictions by $440 million in the fiscal year that ended June 30, and the cost of fuel was $130 million more than budgeted, he

Alexian Action Defended

Keshena, Wis. (UPI) - A member of the Alexian Brothers Saturday detended the religious order's method of terminating it's agreement with the Menominee Indian tribe over use of a vacant novitiate proper-

Brother Maurice Wilson said the Roman Catholic order should have alerted officials before announcing the termination, but said "we don't feel we've violated any agreement "because a contract has to have a responsive party and the other party (the Indians) has not been responsive at all."

Governmental and tribal officials have criticized the order for the suddenness of the termination announcement that came Wednesday and spawned a night of gunfire and fire bom-

As a result of increased tension in the area, taverns have been closed, police patrols have been stepped up and a curfew for juveniles was enforced Friday night and Saturday as officials hoped to head off any further violence.

The Alexians agreed Feb. 2 to turn over the deed to their 262acre novitiate to the Menominee tribe. The agreement ended a 34day occupation of the facility by members of the Menominee Warrior Society.

But Wednesday night they ended that agreement, citing mainly fiscal reasons for the termination.

The novitiate is being patrolled by a commercial security firm which the Alexians have hired at $1,700 a day, but the area has been quiet.

Sewage Pollutes Park

Crater Lake, Ore. - Crater Lake National Park has been shut down indefinetely because its drinking water supply is polluted by a fouled sewage line.

Investigators from the Center for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta, checking on the cause of hundreds of cases of stomach disorder among recent park visitors, closed the park Friday after making tests.

The CDC said that between 500 and 1,000 persons had become ill in the park since mid-June, complaining mostly of severe nausea, diarrhea and Public health specialists said those victims - and thousands of unknown others - risked hepatitis. Letters went out to all visitors who happened to have left their names, advising that they seek a physician and gamma globulin innoculations.

Supt. Richard A. Sims said a blockage in a sewer line under a deep snowpack was discovered several hundred feet south of the main lodge near the crater rim. Raw sewage poured onto the ground and eventually ran downhill into Munson Springs, the park's only drinking water supply, Sims said. He added the sewage did not enter the lake itself.

First Hathaway Decision Pro-Mining By Ben A. Franklin (c) New York Times

Washington — In his first important decision in the conflict between energy development and environmental protection in the West, Interior Secretary Stanley Hathaway has overruled advisers and ordered the preparation of a controversial environmental impact statement that seeks to justify the massive leasing of more federally owned coal deposits under the western

The so-called coal leasing programmatic impact statement, which is regarded as "still defective" by several Interior Dept. officials, stirred criticism

when it was issued for public comment in May 1974.

Hathaway's choices, now that the statement is reported to have been "revised and improved," were either to re-issue it as a revised draft for a second round of comment — a process that would delay again its publication as a final impact review - or to proceed quickly to publication in final form.

He is said to have chosen the latter.

A final environmental impact statement is required under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969.

Some 16 billion tons of federally owned western coal has already been leased, but energy corporations have been clamoring for more through the lifting of an Interior Dept. leasing moratorium imposed in 1973 pending completion of the impact study.

The new secretary's officially "tentative" decision to "go final" reportedly was reached July 3, at the end of his third week in office.

The politically sensitive decision has still not been generally announced.

But Jack Horton, assistant secretary for land and water, said in a telephone interview Friday that "the tentative decision is to go final" on the disputed environmental impact

One or more of the environmental groups whose opposition to Hathaway's appointment delayed his Senate confirmation to the cabinet post for 43 days last spring is expected to sue the secretary.

Katherine Fletcher, a spokesman for the Environmental Defense Fund, reached by telephone at the group's Deuver office, said, "We have as much as told them at Interior that we would sue if they did this, and Comments on the original 1974 draft of the coal leasing statement were uniformly critical.

Irish May Have New Story to Tell

Parts of the manuscript are clearly "fanciful," as Severin admits, and old Brendan doubtless had the gift of gab for which the latter-day Irish are famous.

At one point, for example, he claims to have landed his boat on the back of a whale, got off and cooked lunch, using the whale as a picnic table, and then set sail again.

But Brendan was widely known as a great navigator and he and other Irishmen of the time did do a lot of adventurous scafaring.

Severin, supported in his speculations by other scholars, thinks much of the "Navigatio" could be based in fact. Irish voyagers, if not Brendan personally, could well have made it to America, he believes.

For example, Brendan wrote of touching the shore of an island with "mountains spurting flames and red hot rock" which Severin believes could have been Iceland.

Similarly after sailing for days through thick dark "clouds" (the famous fogs of the Grand Banks off Newfoundland?) Brendan told of at last reaching the "promised land" which by his account was a place of "autumn sunshine, well wooded and with a great river gliding into the interior" which Severin thinks could be North America.

Brendan's account is amazingly specific about the kind of boat he used for the voyage, according to Severin, and he has tried, so far as is possible in modern times, to duplicate the craft.

Similar but smaller boats - called "curraghs" these days - are still in use among fishermen in the west of Ireland where Severin's new "Brendan" is now being built.

The boat, only 36 feet long with an eightfoot beam, looks a bit like a long wicker basket wrapped in leather

The frame, all lashed together with leather thongs rather than nailed or pegged, and other wooden parts of the craft are being made from timbers that would have been available to the medieval Irish - oak and ash.

The hull is being made of "oak bark tanned leather," (from the hides of 25 oxen) as specified in the "Navigatio"

On the voyage Severin and the "Brendan" will also be carrying along great tube of butter with which to "dress" the leather at sea and keep it in condition — butter being, again, what Brendan mentions using for the same waterproofing purpose.

Severin's boat will have two sails, also leather, and four oars plus a steering oar. It is also open to the weather, with no decking, and Severin said he expects the greatest problems to be the cold weather and water in the North Atlantic and "the risk of capsizing."

Severin plans to take a crew of five on the voyage and expects the longest part of the 4,000-mile trip between stops to take

Severin said his purpose on the new "Brendan Voyage" is to "test whether the Irish of those days had the seagoing capacity and skill to get to America."

Severin thinks they did. If they didn't he's likely to wind up pretty wet. But if they did all those Irish Americans who can't go back much farther now than the great potato famine of 1848 are going to have a great new story to tell.

Cape Canaveral, Fia. (UPI) -Sitting in the shadow of this week's Apollo-Soyuz international spaceflight is an unmanned project that costs four times as much - the $1 billion Viking exploration of Mars.

While some 1,300 engineers and technicians are readying the Apollo spaceship for launch Tuesday, a team of 275 is preparing the first of two Vikings for flight Aug. 11.

Viking is an automatied laboratory designed to land gently on the Martian surface and conduct the first search for extraterrestrial life. It carries cameras to scan the surrounding terrain and instruments to analyze the planet's soil for evidence of life, to monitor the Martian weather, detect marsquakes and carry out other studies.

The first Viking is scheduled to complete its 505-million mule voyage by swinging into orbit around the red planet next June. If all goes well, it will land near the mouth of a huge canyon on July 4, 1976 — the nation's 200th birthday.

The Apollo has an on-board computer that, instructed by the astronaut, can control and guide the spacecraft. The computer fires the Apollo rockets or thrusters. Or the astronaut can do the same job manually.

On the Soyuz, the guidance and control is done by an electronic "jukebox" which processes signals from the

Col. Ernest Morgan is flanked by Lebanese soldiers shortly before his release in Beirut. Colonel: I Was Treated Well

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A U.S. Army colonel, kidnaped two weeks ago by Palestinian radicals, was released Saturday after the Lebanese government delivered free food and other supplies demanded in ransom.

Col Ernest R. Morgan's only statement before going into seclusion with U.S. officials was: "Tell my mother I'm fine, glad to be free and alive. I was treated well Moslem leaders who reportedly arranged the release first brought Morgan, 43, of Petersburg, Va., to the residence of Lebanon's Premier Rashid Karami Shortly afterward he was taken to meet U.S. Embassy officials and a spokesman announced he would be secluded at least until Sunday, presumably for a medical checkup and debriefing by American officials. Details of the release were not disclosed.

At her home in Petersburg, Morgan's mother Evelyn Johnson said, "I want to say that all my tears are not for sorrow they're also for joy from the depths of my heart. We didn't know we had so many wonderful friends from all walks of life and in every part of the country until these hours of need.

"I hope the prayers for my son will also bring peace among men.

Morgan was clean shaven, appeared fit and smiled broadly when he arrived at the premier's residence a little more than two hours before the deadline set by his kidnapers for his execution.

He was accompanied by Sheik Abdullatif Ziade, a Moslem religious judge, and Mohammed might endanger other diplomats Mokaddem, a leader of the leftwing October 24 Movement. Reporters were told that

This was reported Saturday by the Soviet news agency Tass in the latest concession to detente. Soviet metrologists decided to remove the time difference for the sake of absolute synchronization in Tuesday's Apollo-Soyuz

"Precision of time measurement is particularly important in this case because the launching pads of the Soyuz and Apollo are 16,000 kilometers (9,942 miles) apart," Tass aid. It noted one-thousandth of a second isn't small-time stuff, declaring that the official Soviet clock is accurate to "one millionth of a fraction of a microsecond. In other words, it would take 30,000 years to build up an error of one second."

Refugees' Hunger Strike Short-lived

Agana, Guam (UPI) - A small number of protesters in the segroup of disgruntled South Vietnamese who want to return home went on a hunger strike after breakfast Saturday but called it off in time for dinner.

A second group went on a hunger strike after lunch but was expected to call it off in time for breakfast today.

Both groups were protesting red tape that has stranded them on this Pacific island on their way back to South Vietnam from the continental United States.

About 40 homesick repatriates out of nearly 1,500 in Guam -251 of them transported from the U.S. mainland - staged the first short-lived strike. The cond group was not immediately

American authorities called the action a demonstration rather than a hunger strike, but appeared to resemble more closely a weight watcher's diet. U.S. officials said they were powerless to speed up the repatriation process, which is in the hands of the Geneva-based United Nations high commissioner for refugees.

"We are watching the situation closely," a military spokesman said.

Also on Guam are some 10,000 Vietnamese refugees still waiting for transportation to the U.S. mainland or for sponsors on Guam.

Darwin, Australia (AP) -Children in Darwin still wake up screaming when the wind picks up. Alleys full of rubble run behind poorly patched homes and shops. Chunks of sheetmetal from destroyed buildings blow across highways.

More than six mouths have passed since cyclone Tracy roared through Australia's Borthernmost city, killing 49 people and wrecking two-thirds of the houses in town. Yet today, much of the city is still devastated.

Bureaucratic delays and the sheer magnitude of rebuilding a city whose normal population is 46,000 have made reconstruction a slow and painful process. Not one new building has been built since the cyclone struck just after midnight last Christmas

The lack of progress threatens to destroy the traditional independence, resilience and community spirit of the "topenders," who transformed Darwin from a one-horse town a century ago to a modern city. Three times they were forced to rebuild: after cyclones in 1897 and 1937, and Japanese bombing

"There is an odd atmosphere now in Darwin," said Christopher Payne, a 23-year-old civil servant, "A slum mentality seems to be developing. Some people are leaving cyclone rubble in their gardens and not trying to improve makeshift con-

"It is depressing to see people shuffling around in old clothes and battered cars.'

Malcolm Smith, a 35-year-old advertising executive, is moving with his family from Darwin after living here for 15 years.

"I have not been encouraged to hammer in one nail or to make one structural alteration,' he declared. "As ambition crushers and dispellers of community spirit, the authorities have excelled themselves."

A major problem was the delay in getting a new building code approved. Until one recently was approved, the government barred people from doing anything more than re-roofing and waterproofing their shattered homes. Now, the government will start work on 1,300 new homes in August. The average cost for a two-bedroom house will be $56,500, or 25% above the cost of homes in the south where materials are easier

Darwin is separated by more than 1,000 miles of desert and plains from the rest of Australia. During the rainy season, roads are closed. The nearest major cities are 900 miles away.

Thousands of residents still live under the patched floorboards of raised houses, and in tents and trailers. Many of the 30,000 people airlifted from the city after the cyclone now have returned. But because shelter is so poor, another exodus might take place before the rainy season in October.

The storm initiated rent cuts of 10 to 30% on damaged buildings. Yet some people desperate for any type of housing have been offering landlords bonuses.

"I am now paying $80 ($106 U.S.) a week for three bedrooms in bad condition unfurnished," said one young woman. "Before Tracy this would have been the same price but fully furnished and in good shape. But if I balk at the price there are 10 others who would jump at it."

There are other problems. A variety of federal and local agencies are administering various phases of the reconstruction, leaving many citizens at a loss over which agency might solve their problems.

There have been two general strikes by construction workers over pay and working conditions. Doctors and teachers are in short supply.

The rest of Australia, which pulled hard for Darwin right after the cyclone and contributed $11 million in relief funds, now seems less excited about the city and its problems.

The song "Santa never made it into Darwin," a mournful country-western number that topped the popularity charts after the cyclone, is rarely heard these days. A recent bill in parliament to provide $77 million in compensation to Darwin families went through only after tough debate.

All in Darwin is not gloom,

Some top-enders remain adamant about rebuilding the place and making their lives normal again, no matter how difficult the task.

Resident action groups have been organized to protect members, interests. One cooperative society offers to save members up to 30% in rebuilding costs.

Gallup Poll Lowest Rating To Big Business

By George Gallup

Princeton, N.J. — The business community in this country needs to undertake a large-scale public relations effort with the American people, and particularly with the younger, better-educated groups which will furnish the nation's future leadership.

Big business currently rates lower with the public than all other institutions comprising what is frequently termed the U.S. power structure.

Organized religion and education rate the highest of the eight institutions tested, while big business and organized labor rank at the bottom.

But it is not the institution of business per se which receives a black eye from the public but "big" business. Whereas only 34% of persons interviewed give big business a high confidence rating (that is, say they have a "great deal" or "quiet a lot" of confidence in big business), the figure is 48% when business is rated without reference to size.

A similar pattern obtains when survey respondents are asked to indicate their degree of confidence in large and small companies. Whereas only 35% give large companies a high confidence rating, 57% do so in the case of small companies.

Significantly, when persons in the survey who are employed by a business concern are asked to rate their own company, nearly seven in ten give it a high confidence rating.

Reasons given most often by those who hold unfavorable attitudes toward big business are: major corporations make excessive profits; energy shortages have been manipulated to the advantage of big companies; the major companies are monopolistic and have too much power; big business is not acting in the national interest and has little concern for the public; big business has little interest in ecological matters.

The survey results on the confidence question:

Dea Qui	il. Te	Some, Very Little, None
Organized religion 6	8%	30%	2%
Education	Ž٩.	31%	2%
The military5	89	37%	5%
Executive branch-
presidency5	2%	45%	3%
Supreme Court 4	94	45%	69
Congress 4	D-c	57%	3%
Organized labor3	8%	58%	4%
Big business3	4%	61%	5%

Analysis of the findings by age reveals that young persons (18 to 29) tend to be more anti-business (and particularly anti-big husiness) than their elders.

Unfavorable attitudes toward big business are especially pronounced among young persons who have attended college. For example, only 25% of young persons who have attended college give big business a high confidence rating.

Conserving Consumer

I have been keeping track of our energy consumption and have found some discrepancies between my records and the Lincoln Electric system bills that show the amount of energy used one year ago. Why do they show it being one year when it is actually 13 months? How can I tell if I am conserving energy with those figures?

-R. H. Longmore, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The Lincoln Electric System billing with the amount of energy consumed one year ago is done with a computer, according to Frank Grant of LES. He said in some cases it does tally 13-month periods because of the way it is programmed. The original concept of the "last year's consumption" was done as a reminder for individuals to conserve energy, Grant said. He complimented you for your efforts. June's bill showed you had used about 200 fewer kilowatt hours than last year for the same month.

Does anyone have the recipe for treating rose petals for a rose jar? -Mrs. Pittam, Alliance ACTION LINE: The county home extension office offers this formula: Use only sweet-smelling rose petals picked when the dew is on. For something extra, add a few geranium petals. Place the petals in a sunny place until dry. Then put the petals in a jar with a tight-fitting lid adding for every quart of petals one orris root (available in some drug stores), one teaspoon each cinnamon, nutmeg and allspice and a small pinch of cloves. Star this daily for six weeks, replacing the lid tightly after each stirring, and the concoction is ready for your rose jar.

How can I secure films of old TV shows for private, nonprofit use?

-Mark Loos, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Securing films of old shows is quite a lengthy and expensive process. Wes Maser, sales manager for KOLN-KGIN TV, said some shows are available through syndication companies. He suggested you check with local stations for a list of these.

Maser noted that the programs are usually rented, not sold, to a customer and generally include a contract of at least one year. Cost for a single episode may run anywhere from $50 to $200. He said these cannot be shown on just any projector, since they are usually on video tape or 16 millimeter film. Either type calls for special equip-

$100.4 Million Mayor's Budget Would Boost Taxes

By Warren Weber

Mayor Helen Boosalis, saying municipal government may be headed for an economic crunch, is proposing a new budget that increases the city's tax rate for the first time in four years.

The results of inflation are being felt at City Hall, and the mayor says that if governmental operating costs continue to rise the city may approach its legal ceiling on the amount of property taxes it can

In a budget message to the City Council, Mrs. Boosalis sounds a note of alarm and assures lawmakers she is willing to work with them in what she considers "a critical year for our city.'

Her budget message and copies of her $100.4 million budget for Lincoln's 1975-76 fiscal year were officially made public

The proposed budget, which cuts back on construction projects, is based on a 1.7-mill increase in the tax levy. And unless City Council members make some major cuts in the budget, which appears unlikely, the tax rate probably will be raised even more to finance salary increases for city employes.

There is speculation the city will give employes a 7.5% across-the-board raise - the same percentage increase granted by the Council last year. That would boost the tax rate another 2.6 mills.

23.40 Mills Now

Lincoln's current tax rate is 23.40 mills. A mill is equivalent to $1 per $1,000 of assessed valuation in tax compilations. Property on city tax rolls is assessed at 35% of its actual value.

If a 7.5% wage increase were added to the proposed budget, the tax rate would be 27.7 mills. That levy would put the city close to its tax ceiling, a dollar figure that translates into a maximum of 29.72 mills for the next fiscal year.

The limitation on city taxes is contained in the City Charter. The ceiling is based on a formula in which the amount of property taxes collected in 1966 for general revenue purposes is increased by a maximum of 7% annually.

The mayor's budger message also suggests that the city schedule a bond election next spring to finance capital improvement projects, some of which were removed from proposed departmental budget requests. If approved by voters, a bond issue would not affect the tax rate for the upcoming fiscal year but would have an impact on tax rates for subsequent years.

The last city bond election was held in 1971, when voters approved an issue to finance the acquisition of the bus service.

Pool Wanted

Mrs. Boosalis suggests that a bond election be held to seek voter approval for a swimming pool at Seacrest Park in east Lincoln at an estimated cost of $350,000 and for an addition to Bennett Martin Public Library downtown at a cost of $450,000.

A possible third item on the election ballot is a proposal for the city to participate in a plan to convert the old Federal Building into a performing arts center and renovate the old City Hail. The Lincoln Bicentennial Commission wants remodeling of those two buildings to be the city's official bicentennial project. Preliminary cost estimates range up to $4

In an apparent attempt to place some restraints on spending, the proposed budget for capital improvements is $13.2 million less than the current budget.

It appears that any headway gained in curtailing construction was lost in the inflated costs of continuing to provide basic city services. Although the total budget is down slightly from last year's $103.6 million, the budget for general government operations is up $1.2 million from

The proposed general government budget, which includes traditional city services, is $24 million. Excluded are selfsupporting operations, such as Lincoln General Hospital, the Lincoln Electric System and the Lincoln Water System.

About 43% of the mayor's proposed budget is financed by property taxes, and slightly more than 23% is based on receipts from the one-cent city sales tax. The sales tax is expected to produce $5.5 million in the next fiscal year, about $250,000 more than it generated last year.

Few Additions

Relatively few employes will be added to the city's work force under the proposed budget except in the joint City-County Health Dept., which would gain 17 new workers.

Also mentioned in the mayor's budget are proposals to hire two higher-echelon staff members for the mayor's office and the Community Development Dept. Both positions would pay $20,000 annually.

Mrs. Boosalis wants to add an administrative director to her staff. She already has an administrative aide, Mike Merwick, whose salary is $16,037. The other $20,000 position would add an

According to Children's Zoo director Alan Bietz, this instance is part of a program to rehabilitate injured birds. Most of them have flown into obstructions or been shot, or poisoned.

"There are not nearly as many gunshot victims as there used to be," said Bietz.

He added that in a year's time, the zoo usually ministers to 10 great horned owls, two or three screech owls, a barn owl and sometimes an eagle.

Bietz said that owis, often shot because of their supposed danger to farm animals, are valuable to the habitat.

They are "mousers with the efficiency of 12 cats," he said. The occasional killing of occasional turkies and chickens is "the most natural thing for them," and shooting owls is the "least effective way" to grt rid of them. "They are quite easy to trap in a humane way and move," Bietz continued.

He encouraged use of crow silhouettes - "they are the mortal enemy of the great horned owl" - or installing strobe

Europeans, he said, often encourage owls to live around their houses to kill

Many people, Bietz said, pick up young owls they presume have lost their mothers. Often, these birds have merely fallen out of trees and will be tended to on the ground.

He urged that if these birds of prey are found and considered wounded, the Nebraska Game Commission or the Children's Zoo should be contacted.

"Definitely do not approach the birds, especially children," he said. "They are traumatized and will defend themselves. And the power in the feet of owis is unbelievable." When the birds enter the 200's care.

much time and money are spent to rehabilitate them, but Bietz said he believes it is a good investment because of the knowledge gained on the animals and their lifestyles.

Much of the aid is in the form of surgery,flushing poison out of the system and setting broken limbs.

Some of the more frustrating rehabilitation involves determining the correct nutrition to make the wings and feathers as strong as they would be from a normal life in the wild. "And we have to teach them how to kill a live mouse," he said.

"We have released everything we have Only those birds which cannot fend for themselves are kept at the zoo.

Bietz said that birds of prey such as hawks, owls, falcons and eagles are "federally protected" and "stiff fines" are given to those destroying them.

Corrections Official. Crime-Prone Age Group

Time — and the birth rate of years past — is on the side of the crime fighters in this country.

The number of individuals in the 15 to 24 years of age group which is responsible for most criminal offenses in the U.S. will peak in 1975, Dr. Robert Fosen explained in Lincoln this week.

By 1976, the portion of the population in that age range will begin going down.

Fosen, executive director of the national Commission on Accreditation for Corrections, was here to speak to Jaycee Criminal Justice Coordinators from 50 states meeting Thursday through Sunday at Airport Holiday Inn.

The peak of the crime-prone group may be "the greatest single thing we can say for future crime reduction," he said.

"We simply have to make our communities safer," he continued, pointing out that serious crimes have increased from 17 to 30% in one year.

"Better corrections is one way . . . And I'm very optimistic that the accreditation commission will have a tremendous impact in the field."

When the 20-member commission completes its work, every agency in corrections will be encouraged to meet approved standards and receive national accreditation, in much the same as hospitals and schools.

Nebraska is interested in being one of first to be accredited. Fosen said the commission expects to have "2,000 to 3,000 standards drawn up by Christmas - so big and complicated because they cover everything from probation to institutions, juvenile to adults."

Though not final, he suggested the guidelines would specify that institutions be no larger than 500 to 600 individuals and that probation caseloads be limited to 30 to 35.

Fosen, who holds a doctor of philosophy degree, was at Attica "before, during and after" the prison exploded in violence and rioting several years ago. Little can be accomplished in big institutions, he said, noting Attica now has 2,460 inmates.

The accreditation director said, "Only about one-fourth nationally of those coming to court should go to prison. All it does is incapacitate."

Will Peak in '75 - Fosen guidelines showed "the great bulk of changes needed had to do with quality and procedures - not new laws and money," Fosen said. Another need was to priorities with staff and facilities already available. Another was for new legislation and new budget money. "We feel correctional agencies can make a lot of improvements internally with their present money and present

Crop Prices, Weather Big Farm Credit Posers

By Dominick Costello Farm Editor

There is money available for farmers to borrow and the interest rates are dropping. The big question is how much can a farmer borrow with a reasonable chance of paying it back.

"I am reasonably sure farm income is going to be below what it has been for the last year or two. We are still feeling the effect of the drought and the bath that our cattle people took last year," said John Cattle, president of Cattle National Bank, Seward.

"How do you figure what a farmer's income is likely to be when everything he buys is going up and the price of what he sells fluctuates 40e a bushel in two days. This sort of thing is tough on farmers and lenders," said Dwayne Dietze, president of the Lincoln Production Credit Assn.

Watch the Weather

"We just plain guess. We try to make it an educated guess as to what the crop will produce and what prices will be. You watch the economy, the export market and the weather," said Cattle.

Two factors have somewhat the farmer but both may be temporary. Dietze cited better cattle prices in recent weeks as a factor that had helped a number of his borrowers recover earlier losses. And cattle noted that the possibility of Russia buying wheat had improved the lot of many farmers who had a good crop but low prices.

The cattle price situation also has a lot of unanswered questions for both lenders.

"Tell me what feed grain will cost this fall. If feed is cheap there may be some profit there but there are a lot of cattle increased the odds in favor of around and consumers are showing signs of price resistance to beef," Dietze said.

'We took a real bath in the cattle business in this area. It is better now but I doubt that it is over. The cow-calf people have held onto their calves; some have last year's calves. If they have feed they may continue to hold but eventually all these animals will have to go to market," Cattle said.

A Problem Area

Cattle noted that there were reports that some hog producers were starting to expand production. "This could become a problem area for lenders if cattle prices drop. You can get more for a sow than for a cow now but if cattle prices really drop it will have to hurt hog prices some,'

Cattle said farm machinery sales have been good so far this year but added "farmers are waiting to see what kind of a crop they get and what the price is. I think there will be a lag in sales for a while until they see how things are going economically," he said.

Both lenders confirm that farmers are generally managing to get their present loans paid with the exception of a few who Farmers Retiring Cattle expressed fears that some federal farm lending programs would be curtailed. putting the squeeze on cattlemen.

"We worked on getting this emergency cattle loan program. Now some congressmen are saying we aren't using it. You can't borrow money under today's cattle conditions but we will need this program in a year or 18 months from now when things improve. The nation needs these programs to be sure consumers have an adequate supply of meat," Cattle said.

Cattle predicted that lending agencies would be able to perform under government program rules better than in the past. "I think these programs will function more smoothly in the future," he predicted.

Some Reasons

The Agricultural Prices Summary for 1974 just issued by the U.S. Department of Agriculture shows some of the reasons farmers need more money to operate on this year.

The report shows 90-plus horsepower tractor prices jumped from $10,500 to $17,500 in 18 months. Combines increased in price from $27,000 to $32,000 in just 3 months.

Egg-type pullet chicks increased from $11.70 to $28 a hundred. Ammonium nitrate fertilizer, which averaged $60.10 a ton in September of 1969, jumped to $240 a ton this year. The price of an ordinary claw hammer increased from $4.46 to $8.20 and pitchforks moved up from $7.56 to $9.19.

"This was the most expensive year that farmers ever put in. These are very expensive crops they are harvesting," said

Teachers Gain Clout

Teachers have talked about involvment in politics and governmental decision making for years. Their commitment often has been more to rhetoric than to action. Signs surfaced during the National Education Assn. (NEA)

Los Angeles convention last week that NEA and individual teachers may have more impact now. Concern for individual security and how to combet inflation-inspired cutbacks in budgets and jobs also were emphasized during the gathering of 9,000 delegates including about 100 Nebraskans.

It appears the nation's largest professional organization with 1.7 million members will endorse a presidential candidate for the first time in its history, but Nebraskans are leading a fight for a non-endorsement option.

Nebraskan Opposes Endorsement

Bellevue teacher Phil Kaldahl, Nebraska State Education Assn. president, was one of 50 delegates who initiated a resolution directing that when delegates are queried about presidential choices there should also be a "no endorsement" box to check. "They fought half the afternoon," he said, but all moves to reconsider the no-option endorsement failed and delegates voted to include it on the ballot.

NEA's political arm, PACE, will interview candidates before it polls delegates to the 1976 NEA convention, after the party conventions.

The winning candidate must have at least 56% of the vote to be endorsed by NEA, Kaldahl said, and inclusion of the noendorsement option should make that more difficult.

The association nationally has had less than sparkling success in efforts to raise millions for a political war chest similar to AFL-CIO's. (Delegates, incidentally, again turned thumbs down on merger with the American Federation of Teachers if AFL-CIO membership is mandatory.)

Nebraska, Kaldahl said, has the highest percentage of teachers in any state (95%) giving to PACE for politics.

State Sen. Frank Lewis, Bellevue teacher, saw more teacher-legislators at the convention than a few years ago, another sign of growing teacher political involvement.

'Door Open to Teachers'

Kaldahl was pleased when exNebraskan Virginia Trotter, education secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, told delegates "the door to the White House is open" to teachers.

NEA national board promise "an increase in involvement of teachers at all decision-making levels," Kaldahl said. "This is a new trend, and it's a good one."

This plus an April appearance by President Ford before the

A more disturbing trend is budget and staff cuts by schools. Outgoing president James Harris, Des Moines, said "undercutting our education programs is indefensible. Tomorrow it can mean more crime, larger welfare rolls, fewer productive taxpaying citizens, weakened military strength and less individual fulfilment."

Ford policies contribute to high teacher unemployment, Harris charged. (Lower birth and enrolment rates, however, have been a major factor.)

Ford Programs Criticized

New NEA president John Ryor, Battle Creek, Mich., who defeated Harris and Roberta Hickman, executive committee member from Illinois, called Ford programs "an al He said NEA must make sure some politicians join teachers in the unemployment lines.

Teachers told of using their own money to pay for assistants or supplies, and described cities where handicapped students are not identified because it would cost too much to educate them. "This recession is destroying quality education," Harris

Brochure Promotes Missouri River

Tri-Staters Hope for Waves of Tourists

By Dean Terrill Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Peru — You'd think they were all $10 bills, the way those 50,000 brochures excite one Joe Masopust.

Or you might think the enthralied Joe was one of the scouts helping row old Lewis and Clark up the Missouri River. Anyway, you don't find manv such New Yorkers around who are raving about Nebraska and its attractions.

The enthusiastic Peru transplant has been making waves along the valley ever since the 1973 organization of the Tri-State Missouri River Development Foundation. He is chairman of the group's 12-member board.

Just off the press as the first concrete evidence of the group's promotion is a colorful brochure extolling the virtues of the area where "Nebraska meets Missouri meets Iowa." Masopust and Dr Daryl Long, a fellow Peruvian and college professor who is foundation president, spearheaded the colorful publication. The State Game and Parks Commission also had a

Two are in Nebraska, wrapping Cass and Otoe Counties in one package and Nemaha and Richardson in the other. The other tours encompass Atchison and Holt Counties in Missouri and Fremont County in Iowa.

"This is practically virgin territory in that it hasn't been publicized before from the standpoint of tourism," said Masopust, formerly director of New York City's retirement system. "Yet this old river is a tremendous asset if we'll only exploit it properly."

A main premise of Tri-State is to promote "orderly development" of all resources along the valley. historic, scenic, recreational and industrial. The brochure barely touches on the broader overall concept.

Masopust, whose unusual name is of Czech origin, said he is personally dedicated to seeing that the Missouri River "doesn't become another Hudson." That eastern river, he explained, is "so over-developed you can't even get to it."

Among the brochure's sightseeing recommendations for this state are Nebraska City's Arbor Lodge and surrounding orchards, historic Brownvine and nearby Cooper Nuclear Station and the rugged Indian Cave State Park. The various features of quaint old Peru and several r cities are also set forth.

Noting that Interstate 29 is nearly completed except for a 25-mile gap near Rockport, Mo., Masopust predicted that the route eventually will carry

"nearly as much traffic as I-80." East across the river, the superhighway is within five miles of Nebraska's border in many places.

Citing "excellent cooperation" among the three states, Masopust is hoping for the same attitude at an anticipated meeting later this month with the U.S. Corps of Engineers. The foundation will be urging development of several recreational facilities along the

Hearings to Probe Family Farm

Washington — Two Senate committees, in an unusual alliance, have drawn up plans for a full-scale inquiry into whether the family farm is fast becoming an endangered species because of federal policies and programs.

Out of the open-ended hearings by the Select Small Business and Interior committees are expected to come legislative recommendations to change the direction of governmental policies across a broad spectrum of laws.

One area of particular import to Nebraskans will be the focus on overhauling the 73-year-old Federal Reclamation Act which has been responsible for opening up vast areas of arid lands to farming through its irrigation and water use programs. The small Business Committee considers the family farmer a small businessman, hence its reason for venturing into the Senate Agriculture Committee's normal turf. Among its members are Democrats Dick Clark of Iowa and James Abourezk of South Dakota.

The Interior Committee is involved because reclamation programs fall under its jurisdiction. Among its members of Clifford Hansen of Wyoming, a Republican, and Abourezk, Floyd Haskell of Colorado and Lee Metcalf of Montana, all Democrats.

Heading the joint hearings will be Gaylord Nelson, the Wisconsin Democrat who chairs the Small Business Committee, and Haskell, designated by Interior Committee chairman Henry Jackson, D-Wash.

Nelson said the hearings, expected to continue through the year, will "examine all aspects of the present condition of the farming establishments of the country that are owned and operated by families residing on or near the land they till."

Major Focus: Survival

The major focus, according to Nelson, will be on two fundamental questions: "Will the family farm survive as the basic economic and social unit in rural America? Are the policies and programs of the Federal Government encouraging or undermining family-farm survival?'

Subject of the July 17 and 22 hearings will be the Westlands Water District of the Central Valley Reclamation Project in California, described by Nelson as "an example of the impact of federal policies upon family farms and the institution of family farming." Member landowners are direct beneficiaries of federal subsidies provided through low cost irrigation water.

This segment appears to be the means to exploring the larger question: Is the original purpose of the Reclamation Act of 1902 being circumvented by favoritism to the large landowner and industrial water users to the detriment of the small agricultural landowner-user?

In announcing the hearings, Nelson pointedly quoted one of the 1902 Act's chief sponsors, Rep. Eben Martin of South Dakota, who said: "The bill is drawn exclusively for the protection of the settler and actual home builder, and every possible safeguard is made against speculative ownership and the concentration of the lands or water privileges into larger holdings.'

These initial hearings also mirror an overriding concern that implies more than survival of the family farm unit - the priority emphasis to be assigned to exploiting energy resources. This was highlighted in the Energy Research and Development 'Administration's recent national energy plan, which called for moving away from oil and natural gas to coal and uranium.

Water or Energy

On one side are those who feel water rights should be preempted to allow development of coal plants and oil shale, and the laying of the coal slurry pipeline from eastern Wyoming across corners of South Dakota and Nebraska to Arkansas.

On the other are those who insist removal of water from rivers and water basins for these massive undertakings would play havoc with the agricultural economic bases of the plains states. They also are apprehensive that selling water at inflated prices to energy companies which can afford it would disastrously upset the balanced economies of the various states.

in Billings, Mont., on Aug. 26 and in Rapid City, S D., on Aug 28 by an Interior subcommuttee consisting of Abourezk and Metcalf. These hearings are unrelated to those scheduled by the Small Business and Interior committees. Certain to be explored by Nelson and Haskell, probably in field hearings in states like Nebraska (no definite date has been set), is the question of state water rights v national interest, that is, the approaching energy shortage (real or imagined). The conflict between the two would be tremendous in a state like Nebraska where domestic and agricultural uses of water have priority over extensive energy development under the state water rights law. In South Dakota, on the other hand, the energy advocates could have the upper hand since transfer of water rights from

The only zoning hearing will be on the application of Reinholdt Rutt, Shirley Druse, Helen Donaldson and others to dezone a lot on the southwest corner of 68th and Colfax.

The applications want to rezone the land from K Light Industry to A-2 Single Family. The lot is occupied by a house and a used car lot.

Discrimination to Be School Bd. Topic Tuesday

The Lincoln Board of Education will be asked Tuesday to create a task force to examine policies and practices related to the anti-sex discrimination features of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972.

Rules and regulations recently given federal approval govern discrimination in classes, athletics, scholarships, hiring and other areas.

Lincoln schools earlier had dropped any definition of classes like home economics or auto mechanics by sex and have taken steps to comply with intercollegiate sport and other provisions.

Schools which do not comply may face loss of all federal Guidelines covering intercollegiate sports do not direct that the same amount be spent on both men's and women's competition, but schools must offer comparable programs if women indicate sufficient interest in them.

Supt. John Prusch proposes that the task force of 12 employes, students and others be activated in late August to examine current policies and programs. Reporting deadline will be March 1, 1976.

Parents and students will be notified in September of provisions of Title IX. Gayle Hurlbert, administrative assistant in the personnel department, will be responsible for coordination of compliance and for grievance procedures.

"It is the policy of the Lincoln school district to comply in spirit as well as in fact," says a proposed policy statement to be acted upon during the board meeting Tuesday at 8 a.m. in the administration building, 720 So.

The board also will meet Thursday at 7:30 p.m. for a public hearing on the proposed 1975-76 budget.

Although the $34.7 million general fund budget is largely already set since approximately 85% of it is in salaries previously negotiated, the board will hold a closed session Tuesday on unsettled negotiations with some non-teaching employes.

Ron Brandt, associate superintendent for instruction, and social studies consultant Neal Cross will report on "Man, A Course of Study" in use in several Lincoln schools.

The National Science Foundation-supported course attracted national attention earlier this year when some conand NSF financial involvement. Brandt and Cross say the broadly-based elementary course dealing with anthropology and other aspects of world cultures "is an exciting, stimulating experience" but 'must be taught very differently from traditional social studies bank campaign.

Teachers must have either had a 40-hour seminar or have worked with a trained teacher.

Careful consideration will be given to results of a national evaluation of the course by Antioch College in 1974-75 which included four "Man" classes and four more traditional classes in Lincoln, the administrators said.

Leffler to Lead 4-H Bank Campaign

Charles R. Leffler, vice president of First National Lincoln, will again head the Nebraska 4-H

The campaign goal is to raise money for 4-H programs in national citizenship and leadership. Smith said this year's goal is $120,000; last year it was

Pay-Cash-for-Livestock Idea Backed by Huesman

Amarilio, Tex. (UPI) - L the federal government would update the 1921 Packers and Stockyards Act and force packing plants to pay cash for livestock, beef producers would not be holding $24 million in uncashable checks, a Kansas livestock official told a U.S. House subcommittee Saturday.

"Over the past five or six years with the development of commercial feedlots and more direct huying across the country, the payment for cattle has been slower and slower, Virgil Huesman of the Kansas Livestock Assn. told the subcommittee field hearing.

"It is this delay in payment that has made the whole issue of packer payment so volatile and controversial today. It is our opinion that if American Beef Packers had simply been required to pay for cattle on the day they took delivery of the cattle we might have only $1-2 million rather than the $22-24 million in uncashable checks

American Beef operated one of the nation's largest processing plants in Dumas, Tex., until last January when the firm filed for reorganization under federal bankruptcy laws. Checks paid cattlemen who had sold stock to the firm were not negotiable and several small producers across the nation lost a year's income.

Some lawmakers moved to rewrite the antiquated legislation to protect cattlemen and scheduled the Texas Panhandle hearing and another later this month in Omaha.

A representative of the National Independent Meatpackers Assn. told the hearing, chaired by Rep. W. R. Poage, D-Tex., consumers would pay more for beef and pork if packers were required to pay cash to producers on the day livestock was acquired.

Curtis Jones of Wichita, Kan., said the price of cattle would be affected by $1 a head. The current purchase system allows the packers to have, in effect, interest free loans for short periods of time because they can delay payments to the cattlemen.

Elimination of this method would limit packer capital and thus they would charge more for processed beef in order to maintain what they considered sufficient cash flow.

Representatives of the Livestock Laws Reform Commission said legislation proposed by subcommittee members including a bill by Rep. Jack Hightower, D-Tex., was stopgap proposals advanced each time the nation faces difficult economic times. They suggested greater reform of the act.

Swimming Pool, Library Addition Cut

Capital Improvement Budget Drops $13.2 Million will have an easier time getting a monitoring system so that the funds to be transferred to

By Lynn Zerschling

If Lincolnites want a new swimming pool and a major addition to the main library, they'll probably have to say so at the ballot box next spring

In order to finance those two projects with general obligation bonds. Mayor Helen Boosalis is recommending that the vote

The swimming pool and library addition were axed from the mayor's $24 8 million capital improvements budget

Mrs Boosalis said in a letter to the City Council that she found it impossible" to put the items in her regular budget Costs are skyrocketing, revenues aren t, she said And in an apparent attempt to hold the line on spending, the capital construction budget is down $13.2 million from this year's appropriation

The mayor said the proposed swimming pool and library construction are needed, but contended it is "impossible to

Reward Offered In Blast

Plainview (UPI) - The Plainview City Council has approved the offering of a $1 000 reward for information in the July 4 explosion of a bomb on the front lawn of Police Chief Kenneth Leiding's home

The early morning blast knocked windows out of the house but there were no injuries Pierce County and Plainview authorities were continuing their investigation, which, at one point was aided by the Federal Bureau of Investigation

The reward offer seeks information leading to the arrest and conviction of anyone responsible for the explosion

The swimming pool would be built at Seacrest Park, in southeast Lincoln, at a cost of $350,000.

A pool for the Meadowlane area was approved in the 1974-75 budget That pool cost $260,000 The addition to Benett Martin Public Library carries a $450,000

price tag Finance Director Jim Mallon said those general obligation been upgrading Lincoln Transportation System (LTS) equipment and routes.

To increase service, Mayor Boosalis proposes the city buy 13 full-sized buses, for $845,000 Additional money would be spent for a new garage, bus stop signs and bus shelters

Under the mayor's plan the city would apply for federal aid to pickup  $80^{\circ}c$  of the bill. The remaining 20% would come out of the bus reserve fund

Purchase of the new equipment is in line with a recent transit study which says LTS will have to drastically expand service in order to entice more Lincolrutes onto those buses

However, even if the federal aid is approved, it would take a year to deliver the buses to Lincoin.

The mayor has included $800,-000 for arterial street resurfacing, $875,000 for residential street resurfacing and $875,000 to build a new road division building at 7th and Vine Sts

The proposed 1975-76 capital improvements budget is down partially due to reducations in the electric system, Lincoln General Hospital and sanitary sewer s budgets

LES Budget

A major hunk of the Lincoln Electric System's (LES) $15 million construction budget is spread out among transmission lines, substations and street

But more than those projects, it is going to cost LES more to buy power to keep the lights on into the 1980s.

Mayor Boosalis has budgeted $1.6 million alone to help pick up Lincoln's share of the bill to build a big coal-fired generating complex in Wyoming The decision to join five other utilities in that plant has not yet been

Another $400 000 has been budgeted so LES can join with Omaha in the construction of the Ft Calhoun nuclear reactor

A major departmental budget which increased is the Parks and Recreation Dept's proposed capital expenditure of $1.1 million

The mayor has budgeted $150 -000 to pay the city's share to build a recreation center at Irvingdale Park, a joint venture between the city and school

Tree planting also continues to play a major role in the department's plans to green Lincoin neighborhoods, for $110,-000, and downtown, for $20,000.

Another $30 000 has been budgeted to start planning for and developing the Crescent Green areas along creek beds

Plans also call for improvements to be made to Antelope, Southwood, Lagoon, Bethany, Ballard and Piedmont parks and to Mahoney Golf Course The mayor also is proposing

The mayor says she has asked department heads to make every effort to Operate without filling vacancies that occur in their offices. Her goal is to hold the line on government spending.

The proposed budget includes $2.5 million in federal revenue-sharing funds The largest budgeted item in this category is $730,183 earmarked for construction of storm sewers. These funds, a windfall to many cities and counties, are provided by the Revenue Sharing Act, which began in 1972 and expires at the end of 1976 Whether a new act will be passed by Congress remains to be seen.

County Commissioners Afraid Levy May Bump Tax Ceiling

By Bart Becker

Lancaster County Commissioners say the county mill levy will increase this year, although they don't yet know how much because they haven't received all department budget requests.

In May, county fiscal analyst Elmer Cheek optimistically predicted a slight tax increase at most He suggested a new budgeting system he is implementing could sufficiently cut financial corners.

Now commissioners are apprehensive they may be approaching the county's property tax ceiling. The Nebraska Constitution limits the tax to 50c per $100 actual valuation, which figures out to a maximum of 14.28 mills. To go beyond that ceiling requires voter approval.

The mill levy is now 10.6 mills. It was as high as 13.8 mills in # Alternative Health Care Program Proposed by Community Assn.

By Bess Jenkins

You should be able to pick out your own doctor and have the right to select the kind of medical care system you prefer, says the American Medical Assn. House of Delegates.

Lincoln's new Community Health Care Assn. (CHCA) board feels citizens have such rights, too. But such a stand, to be meaningful, must offer alternatives, and Lincoln has none now, they say.

This is why the nonprofit consumer-oriented board unanimously voted Saturday to proceed toward establishment of a Health Maintenance Organiza-

Grant Draft

CHCA chairman Don Nielsen and executive director Alex Slabowsky were directed by the board to draft a $125,000 planning grant from the federal government's HMO program. They want to review it in 30

The federally-financed feasibility study will show an HMO could not survive here under present services which are required for any federallysupported HMOs.

However, the local group is advised that Congress wants to eliminate some of those services.

Lloyd Worley, AFL-CIO representative on the board and a Goodyear worker, says current benefits in the health package for Goodyear workers include all four, perhaps more. And Goodyear would want them all continued under any HMO enrolment. The United Rubber Workers local, has taken a similar stance.

Slabowsky observed the federally-mandated services have pushed 176 of the 180 existing HMOs from seeking federal aid.

At the same time, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare is doing all it can to cut corners on Medicare and other human services which they help finance.

Chevy Okay

"Of course, we would like Cadillac service but we're willing to settle for a Chevrolet in our efforts for alternatives," said Slabowsky.

The report commends "health care delivery in Lincoln that may be superior in some way to the way health care is delivered in similar communities. This does not mean that there are no problems or dissatisfaction, or that there isn't potential for significant improvements." Working projections in the feasibility report show cost per average family under the HMO plan would be $55.98 monthly or less cost for more benefits than by most health insurance firms, says the board.

Blue Cross-Blue Shield rates in Lancaster County range from a low of $33.32 a family a month to a high of $80.04 according to the Slabowsky reports the study shows health insurance coverage is very limited among some 80 or so Lincoln firms employing 100 or more workers each. An exception is Goodyear, paying $60 monthly toward family coverage. Lowest is around $18 a medical package to perhaps 10% of the community's 183,000 population.

The targeted 18,300-persons enrolment would not be reached overnight. It is estimated the HMO system could break even financially within three years if 8.051 persons signed up. First year projection is 1,473, and second,

All projections are based on citizens paying up to $15 a month less now than under HMO coverage. But in return, this will give the enroled participants far more for the extra dollars, according to the report.

Lincoln's HMO would be a far cry from such giant centers as the Kaiser Center prepaid programs.

The big similarity to the Kaiser concept would be its set annual costs on a monthly basis like traditional insurance.

Doctors charge patients on a fee to you and your insurance firm) for services under present local practices.

CHCA would not own or invest in any real estate or personally direct health services. It would administer and market the health protective concept in the community, mostly by group plans but individually as well.

CHCA's proposal is for physicians of the primary category -- such as family practitioners, pediatricians, obstetricians, internists - who agree to work for the alternative health care system to be responsible for all clinical or patient group activity.

Key Person

"The key person would be a medical director, a physician capable, qualified and respected by the some 270 doctors in the community," said Slabowsky. who added that a director should be hired as soon as possible. The CHCA will ask that Washington permit it to keep an unspent $28,000 remaining from the $50,000 feasibility grant to begin planning. The system would look to existing hospitals for prepaid patient care, not establish its own the report states.

"We have too many beds now, 5 beds per 1.000, and a 73.5% average occupancy among the four last year," said Slabowsky. Local and regional comprehensive health planning agencies and their councils agree. He said all four hospitals have said physicians contracting to work under one roof to provide prepaid medical care would get the same cooperative support as other doctors.

The CHCA report says the city has no group practice, aside from the Lincoln Clinic and University of Nebraska Health Center. Many doctors occupy the same buildings but not as consolidated practicing groups that could eliminate some costly duplication. Nearly 20% of the nation's doctors today are in some true group practice, according to the report.

The CHCA would not attempt to hire specialists, but have its medical staff refer patients to existing ones. The HMO medical staff would practice the fee-for-services type of medicine until the prepaid HMO load reached maximum

The report shows a minimal interest, perhaps a lack of understanding of the HMO concept here on the part of most physicians, especially older ones.

Younger Doctors

Since the average age of Lincoln doctors is 51, and more than 60 are over the 60-year mark, it is expected the community will need and welcome more vounger physicians.

The board was told it probably would be January, 1978, before the HMO operation could start. After the $125,000 financed year of planning starting around next December or January, Slabowsky said CHCA could apply for up to $1 million in a development grant.

After that, CHCA would be on its own, except a federal guarantee to loan two-thirds of any annual losses. CHCA would have to pay back any money it borrows to make up deficits.

So without using the federal dollar helping hand, Lincoln couldn't afford to finance or offer this alternative health system on its own at this time, board members were told.

Nelson: Jackson Tough as Nails

believes in openness.

Government is "a private fiefdom, for the elected or appointed," he adds.

Nelson says this is a Nixon-era legacy that he's more aware of since deciding to return to government service. As the new director of the State Insurance Dept., he'li need openness, plus candor, patience and maybe a thick skin that sheds criticism. When he takes over the job from Jim Jackson in mid-August, Nelson will be left with some problems related to Pioneer Insurance Co., even if its assets have been sold by then. "If Pioneer's status hasn't been resolved, I suppose I'll inherit some of Jim's detractors,"

Nelson says.

This spring Jackson dissolved a voting trust which was running Pioneer, to place it under his supervision. And now that the Benjamin Nelson of Omaha Lincoln-based firm has been delcared technically impaired, the department is moving to reinsure its remaining policies.

Nelson said he hasn't been aware of critics within the fraterntly of Nebraska-based insurance companies who have been taking pot-shots at Jackson.

A vocal few have been busy. The snipers said Jackson had been too soft on Pioneer. That he had hidden the scope of its problems. That he had been too cozy with bank creditors of Superior Equity Corp., the parent of Pioneer, in forming the voting trust.

Reputation Droop?

That Jackson's cadre of examiners are either too inexperienced or too old to tightly monitor the domestic (Nebraska) insurance companies. And that the reputation of Nebraska as a leader in regulating insurers has

Nelson, who held various posts in the State Insurance Dept. from 1965 through 1972, reacted with vigor to these innuendos:

"Jim tough? Hell, be's not reluctant to take on anybody. Some people feel that unless you have a press conference every week and condemn somebody. you're not tough.

"He did everything possible to keep Pioneer from ending up where it is now.

"When I worked shoulder to shoulder with him, I found he could be tough as nails - some would say too rough. There are always going to be detractors when you put a company into insolvency.'

"Do you judge a police department by its prosecutions, or by its crime prevention?" he added. "Jackson and his people have been very active in the insurance unfair trade and sale practices area ... really strict with enforcement."

Nelson agrees that there is "a good deal of turnover among the examiners . . . it's a fine training ground for young lawyers who go on to better-paying positions. but the average age is about 40 over there. That's hardly senile.

Under or Over?

"I want to look closely at pay levels, professionalism and work loads," he continued. "It's too easy to assume that turnover means they're underpaid. It may just be the nature of the work.

"Would it pay to overstaff," Nelson asks, "in order to turn up one or two major problems in a 10-year period?"

The day Jackson resigned, he said that major problems within a company "can occupy the time of 80% of our staff. Then you get behind on other exams and the problem is how to keep all the balls in the air at once  $\dots$

The Pioneer exam, at the end of a three-year cycle, had been delayed by mergers into it.

"It's really amazing that coming in cold - an examiner approaching this sort of complex audit, can turn up the problems that he does — it's part luck and part skill," Nelson said. "Sometimes even the employes of a company don't realize they have a thorny situation ..." Nelson said he's idealistic enough that he "accepted Gov. Exon's pledge that the job will be generally free of political pressures . . . I feel that when you're a regulator you can't be motivated by whose ox you're January, Nebraska will have "the first banker-designed statewide money transfer system," explained Russell Browne, advisor for payments systems, the U.S. Comptroller of the Curren-legislation, much of it patterned after what's happening in Nebraska," Browne said. California and Florida have multi-county terminal systems, Browne noted, but they were put together by the savings and loan

Will the national banks in Omaha put terminals in Lincoln retail outlets?

That can't happen.

Last may Comptroller Smith specified that national bank terminals could not be put in locations more than 50 miles away from a bank's main or branch office. Browne sees Omaha as a more dispersed marketing area: "It has an older population, with many more people apt to use bank terminals in stores for convenience sake." Browne is a former Omahan, volve a year to 18 months of charges and cost $300,000, even for a small $50 million bank," So the logical evolution, he continued, is that EFT systems will develop in areas of high population during the next two to three years and then be offered to country banks through correspondent banking networks.

The Controller's office "wants te avoid, at all costs, even the appearance of homogenized public utility-type electronic transfer systems," Browne said. "This means we'll encourage strong competition in service packages and between systems. The more that innovative customer service ideas are offered, the better.

"After all, who would have thought 18 months ago that money transfer history would be made in a Lincoln grocery store?"

Experience will determine, he says, "the system that customers want, need, and are willing to pay for." But Browne says it will be at least a decade before such experimental systems are linked nationally "...so we really don't need a moratorium on electronic funds transfer, as some people advocate. The best concepts will survive," he adds. "It isn't that we know all the answers, however; we don't even have all the questions."

Terminal Use Surprises Banker

Although the consumer will make the final decisions about what form of electronic money transfer he is willing to trust, changes ARE coming. The sheer bulk and bother of check writing has ordained it.

The first week of consumer response to Omaha National's use of 19 banking terminals has provided some surprises for Ray Howell, the bank's executive vice president. (14 are Money Service terminals in Hinky Dinky stores).

"We found out that the elderly consider them very convenient, he noted, "rather than resist the technology, as we had feared."

During its first eight-day use period last week, the system handled almost 1,200 transactions and ended with a net deposit gain, in checking and savings, of $115,000. Although checking deposits and withdrawals far outnumbered savings transactions, Howell believes that people will gradually begin to use bank savings accounts as "a vehicle for transferring funds,' something which the S&Ls have been openly advocating for

While on deposit, they would bear interest. He predicted that the Federal Reserve will consider seriously making nationwide the experimental Negotiable Orders of Withdrawal (NOW) system that allows a customer to write a check on his savings account.

But John Dean, president of

First Federal of Lincoln, goes further: "Electronic banking is already such a success that interest-bearing checking accounts are a moot point . . . we already have them in a roundabout way. Congress ought to directly authorize them."

Unusual Training Maneuver Aids Bold Trap

By Mark Gordon

Omaha - Even Dan Von Hemel admits he performed "an unusual training

"That's probably the first time I've ever done that," said Bold Trap's trainer after the speedy colf triumphed Saturday in the $54,825 President's Cup Handicap at Ak-Sar-Ben. "But you have to treat each individual differently.

"I have to train Bold Trap so hard between races, I thought that if I ran his against older horses. I could ease up on him training for this race," he continued. "I was never worried about running him teday. He's a big, stout horse. He must outweigh every other 3-year-old in the

The horsemen's "unofficial rule book" maintains you don't run 3-year-olds against older horses. It takes too much out of them ... the younger ones can't compete as well and it isn't fair to the 3-year-olds.

Von Hemel went against that adage. He ran Bold Trap last Saturday in the $107,800 Cornhusker Handicap against older horses. Bold Trap finished a creditable fourth.

That made him ready for Saturday's chase against six 3-year-olds at one mile and one-eighth.

He broke second behind the pacesetting Gray Bar, who figured to be the pacesetter. But then Gray Bar suddenly fell off the pace around the first turn.

That's when Bold Trap went in front for

"I hadn't really planned it that way," noted Bold Trap's rider, Dan Whited. "I had wanted to lay second, but when he started to get rank, I thought I'd he better off to make my own pace."

Turning into the stretch, it appeared as if Mrs. Frank Preston's Huggles Ferry, an invader from Chicago, was going to catch Bold Trap. Then near the wire, it appeared as if Bob Clayton's Promised City would catch Bold Trap.

"When Ruggles Ferry hooked (pulled even) with us, that set the race up for Promised City," said co-owner Richard Boushka of Wichita, Kan. "He (Bolt Trap) outgamed Ruggles Ferry and then held off Promised City.

"Running against older horses helped Bold Trap. When that horse pulled even with him at the top of the stretch, Bold

Trap knew he could beat these 3-year-

He did — by a neck. But that was enough and it proved that Von Hemel knew what he was doing when he entered Bold Trap in the Cornhusker.

"We really debated it," noted co-owner H.A. Mayer of Omaha. "But we relied on Don. A lot of people counseled us on what to do. He's had three tough races now to tighten him up."

"Dan tells me our colt was a little rank when he was behind Gray Bar. But he seemed to relax on the front end," noted Von Hernel.

He said Bold Trap would be given a vacation at a ranch 20 miles south of Pueblo, Colo. His next races will be at Oaklawn Park in Hot Springs, Ark., next winter and then he will return to Ak-Sar-Ben next

All of Bold Trap's connections noted that the victory eased the pain of the 4-H Handicap here on June 14. That's when Bold Trap won, but was disqualified and placed third for interfering with Gray Bar in the stretch.

It was the greatest day ever for Von Hemel, who sent three horses to the post and won all three. His other victories were with Delbert Rathman's Ridesiren ($7.40) in the second and the Wilkerson Farms' Stanton County ($12.00) in the third. Those wins helped him defeat Hoss Inman for second place in the trainers' standings by one

The win with Bold Trap was the fourth for Whited, who nudged brother David for second place in the final jockey standings. Dan won on Rideniron, Stanton County and the Kansas City Racing Stables' Meadow Duel ($7.00) in the fifth.

The win was Bold Trap's sixth this year with one second and one third in 15 runs this year. The winner's share of $30,153.75 boosted Boid Trap's 1975 earnings to $80.

As the third-choice of a record Ak-Sar-Ben crowd of 31,219, Bold Trap returned $8.80, $4.00 and $3.20. Promised City, who carned $10,416.75 for second, returned $4.20 and $3.00. Ruggle's Ferry showed for $3.20.

For Gray Bar, who finished last after winning the $100,000-added Omaha Gold Cup Stakes here two weeks, it may have been a costly setback.

"At the %ths pole he was hurting and he started backing up. I think he hurt himself," noted Gray Bar's rider, Ken

Watson Alters Choke Image

Carnoustie, Scotland (UPI) - Tom Watson has a recurring nightmare.

It's seeing himself in the lead of a major golf championship and then blowing it. He did it in the fourth round of the U.S. Open in 1974 and again this year after holding the halfway lead.

There was talk about choke. Watson would have none of it.

The young Huck Finn look-alike proved he could stand the heat Saturday with a 12foot birdie putt at the 72nd hole to earn an 18-hole playoff with Australian Jack Newton on Sunday for the British Open title.

"I've blown two Open leads at home," he said. "Maybe the third time's a charm." Watson showed his mettle by sticking with his game plan despite thinking "I'm dead, I don't have a chance," as he stood on the 18th tee with Newton holding a two stroke advantage. "Byron Nelson told me before the round Watson said. "With these finishing holes, you have a chance even if you're four or five strokes back.' He had three-putted at 10, 11 and 12 and that you can't quit at this golf course," missed a 12-footer at 17. But he stuck to the strategy: he played the course.

His approach iron at the 448-yard killer 18th hole rolled down a hump to within 12 feet of the pin and, without looking back, he stepped up and rolled it in.

"When it hit the back of the hole," he recalled, "I didn't know if it was going in or

It dropped, Newton bogeyed 17 and Watson had his chance for redemption.

"I can't say I'm nervous, but I'm restless," he said. "I want to get on with it. Noon tomorrow won't come too soon. Newton, dejected, said "I'll never have a better chance for a British Open than I had today." "Fate was with me." the 25-year-old Watson said of the shot that earned him an even par 72 and a four-round total of 279, nine under par. A disappointed Newton, also 25, bogeyed three of the last four holes and finished with a two-over-par 74. "It wasn't a case of Tom winning a tie with me," Newton said. "It was a case of me giving him a tie."

A strong wind from the east finally roused this tiger of a Carnoustie course, put a stop to a par busting rampage over its 7.065-yards of hillocks, and allowed only four subpar rounds on the last day of this oldest of golf classics to a final field of 60.

The gusty winds could not deter Watson and Newton from breaming Ben Hogan's 22-year-old Carnoustie tournament record of 282, but it did keep them away from the open mark of 276 set by Arnold Palmer in 1962 and equalled by Tom Weiskopf two

The winner of Sunday's playoff stands to gain $16,500, with the loser entitled to $13,-200 from a total purse of $165,000.

Watson was four strokes behind leader Bobby Cole of South Africa and another three behind Newton when he set out in a final round drive to prove once and for all that he could stand the pressure since his successive blowups as the leader of the last two U.S. opens.

Cole, playing with Newton, skied to a 76 with three bogeys in the last four holes and finished one stroke back at 280 in a threeway tie with the two big guns of golf, Jack Nicklans and Johnny Miller.

Nicklaus struggled through the middle holes with bogeys at six and nine but recovered with birdies at 12 and 14 to rally back into contention. But iron troubles on the final three holes never gave him a chance with a makeable birdie putt. He finished with an even par 72. The two-time champion of this event shook his head and said, "I just lost another British Open by one stroke," referring to four previous second place finishes for the leading money winner in Miller lost a stroke to par at the first hole by carelessly missing a four footer, but then made a run at the leaders and had himself in contention by the 14th hole, where he chipped to within three feet and dropped the putt for a birdie that put him one stroke behind the then co-leaders Newton and Cole. But the 28-year-old Californian, too, found himself pushing his irons off target and suffered an 18th hole bogey that cost him a place in the playoff. Miller pushed his drive into a bunker and took a six-iron for a make-or-break attempt at reaching the green and making a birdie he thought he needed for the top spot. But his blast caught the brick-like edge of the trap and rolled back down into the sand at

"I have to say this is the most disappointing finish of any tournament I was ever in," a dejected Miller said. "I missed the playoffs by an inch or two . . . I just figure 'this isn't your tournament big fella'.'

The only sub par round by any of the top 10 finishers was a 71 shot by Australian Graham Marsh, who finished next at 281.

Defending champion and three time winner Gary Player ended the tournament with a 73 for 292 and his playing partner, Lou Graham, the U.S. open champion, shot a 76 for 292. Palmer finished with a 73 for 288, Weiskopf had a 72 for 287, two time winner Lee Trevino had 75 for 293 and Hale Irwin, third leading money winner on the U.S. Professional Tour, had a 75 for 283.

Ak Meeting Outstanding DespiteWoes

Omaha - Ak-Sar-Ben continued its goal of presenting the finest racing ever in 1975. "I believe there was more interest in horse racing this year than at any time since I've been here," said Ak-Sar-Ben general manager Dick Becker. "It's a very healthy situation. We hope we can keep improving each year.

We had an outstanding race meet," he continued. "We had to overcome several obstacles . . . a tornado, long rain period, very hot spell. That's what made the final outcome so rewarding."

Becker praised the racing officials, horsemen, jockeys and Ak-Sar-Ben executive staff for their efforts.

Nebraska Matmen Guarded in Turkey

By Randy York Prep Sports Editor

Nebraska high school wrestlers touring Turkey this summer found out just how important international political ramifications can be.

When Congress voted to continue the American embargo on sending arms to Turkey, the United States weren't exactly the two most popular words to Turks in late June and early July.

Therefore, safety precautions were ordered and carried out for the Nebraska prep wrestlers on their last three Turkish stops in Amasya, Tokat and Sivas.

"It was quite an experience," says Mick Pierce, the former Raymond Central and now North Bend wrestling coach, who headed the touring group of Cornhusker

"We were picked up at our hotel by police and army cars, taken to the matches. guarded there, escorted to the locker room afterwards, shot out of there back into the police and army cars and returned to our hotel, which was guarded overnight," recounts Pierce.

The Turkish experience seemed the most unusual as three Nebraska wrestling groups returned a week ago from tours of Romania and Poland as well as Turkey.

"There must have been 30 police and army people at our matches and I wouldn't know how many more dressed in plain clothes," says Pierce. "Because of a couple radical political parties, the Turks decided to take all the safeguard measures."

At least the matches were held in Turkey. After the Americans won their first two matches in Poland, the opponents didn't show up for the next two, according to Albion wrestling coach Carson Fitzgerald. "I don't know if it was because they had lost the first two, but I'm fairly sure that was the reason they didn't show," says Fitzgerald. "It didn't bother us though. It gave us more time to sightsee southern Lincoln East wrestling coach Jim

According to Pierce, "after we wrestled in Ankara, Kuzu came with us to Corum, then rejoined us in Sivas - 240 miles from his hometown of Istanbul, at his own expense. If he could have, he probably

Woman To Try For Team

Gainesville, Fla. (UPI) - A 20-year-old, 5-8, 140-pound coed savs she intends to become the first woman to try out for the University of Florida men's football team.

Johnnie Mae Richards, a semor from Ocala, Fla., acknowledged Saturday there will be oppostion to her attempt but doesn't mind.

"It's something I've always wanted to do," she said Saturday.

"The harder they make it for me, the harder I'll try," she said.

Her opposition is coming from some expected and at least one unexpected sources. Head football coach Doug Dickey hasn't given her permission to try out yet. He told her he'll have to do some looking into the matter concerning recent U.S. Heath Education and Welfare rules concerning sex discrimination in intercollegiate athletics.

Surprisingly, woman's intercollegiate athletic director Dr. Ruth Alexander isn't sure that Miss Richards' plan is a good

The biggest benefactors of changes at this year's State Fairgrounds' horse race meet, won't be able to say "thank you.

That's because the one group that is the recipient of almost $850,000 worth of improvements are the four-legged animals that more than 150,000 patrons are expected to watch during the 26day Lincoln horse racing meet running from Tuesday through Aug. 16.

"The horsemen tell me it's the best track we've ever had,' noted State Fairgrounds' general manager Henry Brandt "We've spent almost $338,000 on it. We've widened the turns from a 220-degree radius to 300 and that should eliminate the problems with the tight turns.'

Although the Lincoln track will remain at 5/8ths mile distance, the track has been widened to 60 feet which will give jockeys additional room to navigate their mounts.

Besides that, the entire racing surface has been redone, similiar to the renovation job done to the

By Randy York Prep Sports Editor When Rich Behrns and Brad Hoffman talk about trapping, the North Shine Bowl football backs aren't necessarily referring to teammates blocking up front.

More likely, they're talking about an older form of trapping - using a device to take game and other animals.

Behrns, of David City Aquinas, and Hoffman, an eightman standout at Chambers, put trapping on an equally popular basis with hunting.

"I've been trapping for nine years," realtes Behrns. "I started going with my brother, Mike, to lakes and steams around David City before I was

When Hoffman was an eighthgrader, he picked up one of his dad's magazines (Fur, Fish and Game), read it and has spent the last five years trapping.

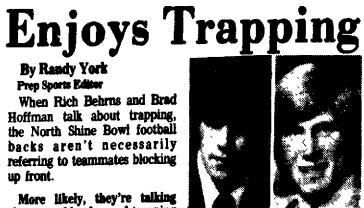

Behrns uses weekends to set his traps, starting near the end of football season. After football practice, he goes home, eats supper, then heads for Doc Lansbaugh's farm one-half mile west of David City to see what he's caught. "We trap muskrat, mink and beaver," notes the Aquinas standout. "If I set a lot of traps, check 'em every night and have some luck, I can make $150 profit in two weeks.'

Hoffman hasn't reaped such financial rewards. "It's more of a hobby with me," he says. "By the time, I pay for the supplies, the gas and running around, I about cover expenses."

The Chambers back gets up at 6 a.m. to set his traps on small farm ponds and creeks before school. He checks them after school. "We get a little of everything," says Hoffman. "We get muskrats, beaver, mink and challenge to me. A lot of times, candidates.

Rich Behrns

they outsmart you." Hoffman uses the more old-fashioned steel-jaw traps for his efforts. Behrns uses killer traps, which kill the animals instantly without causing suffering.

"My brother and I invented a wire trap, too," offers Behrns. "There's a wire gate on each end. When the animals swim in it, the gate closes. Once, we trapped five muskrats at the same time."

Behrns then cleans the animals and sells them "to a guy who roams around this area from Stromsburg."

Prices for the animals' coats have dipped recently, according to Behrns. "At one point last vear, you could get $19 for a mink," he explains. "At the end of the year, I got an offer of $1.75. No one wants them anymore."

Behrns plans to attend the University of Nebraska at Omaha to play football and baseball. Hoffman will concentrate on football at Kearney State College. Thirteen backs, including

By Bob Moyer

Sorting the rumors from the realities will be the toughest assignment Pat Scanlan's going to have as manager of Lincoln's newest bowling establishment, Briar Park Lanes, at 48th and Highway 2.

With speculation concerning a new bowling alley in Lincoln running wild since the City Bowling Tournament in early February, many rumors have cropped up, some far afield from the true situation.

The new bowling alley is expected to be ready by Sept. 1, according to Scanlan. That would be in time for fall leagues and Scanlan is hoping he can get the house filled with league bowling at that time.

'The building wasn't built to be a bowling alley," noted Scanlan. "We're not quite sure how we'll handle the problem of needing two mechanics. But. of course, it's important and we'll have something suitable worked out when the house opens."

Scanlan said the last major item to be completed as far as reconverting the building is installing the lanes themselves.

"They are Brunswick lanes that have been in use in Japan for the past six months," Scanlan said. "Apparently after a meteoric rise in popularity in > "The lanes we are getting are of that type. They have been sanded once and we'll have to sand them again before we can open," he added.

Scanlan, who is currently activities director for the Nebraska Student Union, manager of the Union bowling alley, and coach for the Nebraska pin team, said he will begin his duties at the new bowling alley Aug. 1.

A graduate of Colorado University, Scanlan says that in general "a bowling alley should cater to the bowler who bowls

He says he wants to give all form company leagues or leagues where people know each other well. "An ideal situation would be if someone could get up a league by themselves and bring it to us. I feel that's best because leagues where everybody knows each other tend to stay together and are better leagues than ones where that isn't the case."

> Scanlan alos noted that he felt that a bowling alley should offer pro services, such as balldrilling. However he said that would be at least a year away.

He noted that for the present there would be no hot food service. However, vending machines will be installed for food and situated adjacent to the the game's top players, will be staged in County Stadium Tuesday night with the American League once again seeking to end a National League domination of the mid-season

AL President Lee MacPhail pledged an all-out effort to beat the Nationals in last summer's game at Pittsburgh's Three Rivers Stadium. But the NL prevailed with a 7-2 victory to give it a 26-18 edge with one tie in the series that started in 1933. The Nationals have made the game a virtual one-league show for the last dozen years, winning 11 times to take control in a series they once trailed 12-4.

The Americans will attempt to end their All-Star frustration with an Oakland A's-New York Yankee dominated line-up featuring five first-time starters against an NL cast that is made up almost entirely of Los Angeles Dodgers and Cincinnati Reds and is virtually the same one that began last year's game.

The first-time AL starters will be three Yankees, catcher Thurman Munson, outfielder Bobby Bonds and third baseman Graig Nettles, along with two Oakland A's, catcher Gene Tenace and outfielder Joe Rudi.

The other AL starters are two 46th All-Star Game, showcasing Jackson and shortstop Bert Campaneris, and second baseman Rod Carew of Minnesota, whose 3,165,614 votes was the highest total for any player in the nationwide fan balloting.

Opposing the AL starters will be a starting NL line-up populated almost completely by the Reds and Dodgers. Cincinnati's contingent is headed by catcher Johnny Bench, who led all NL players with 2,930,147 votes. The other Reds are Pete Rose in the outfield and the second baseshortstop combination of Joe Morgan and Dave Concepcion.

From the Dodgers, fans elected first baseman Steve Garvey, the most valuable player in last year's game; third baseman Ron Cey and outfielder Jimmy Wynn. Breaking the Dodger-Red control of the NL starting team was outfielder Lou Brock of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Except for Concepcion and Brock, the NL lineup is the same one that started last year. Concepcion beat out Philadelphia's Larry Bowa, last year's starter at shortstop, and Brock replaced Hank Aaron, traded to the American League Milwaukee Brewers over the ting pitchers Monday. Alston picked three Dodgers, Don Sutton, Andy Messersmith and Mike Marshall, to head his staff along with Tom Seaver and Jon Matlack of the New York Mets, Tug McGraw of Philadelphia, Jerry Reuss of Pittsburgh, Phil Niekro of Atlanta and Randy Jones of San Diego.

Dark's pitchers include two of his Oakland hurlers, Vida Blue and Rollie Fingers, along with Catfish Hunter of the Yankees, Baltimore's Jim Palmer, Nolan Ryan of California, Kansas City's Steve Busby and Jim Kaat and Rich Gossage of the Chicago White Sox.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger will throw out the ceremonial first ball.

Tuesday's clash marks a return to Milwaukee for the All Stars. The game was last played in County Stadium 20 years ago. The Nationals won that 1955 game 6-5 on Stan Musial's 12th inning home run. Musial and Mickey Mantle, who had a threerun homer for the AL that year, will return for Tuesday night's rematch, serving as honorary coaches and accompanying the two managers to home plate for the pre-game exchange of Aaron, who is suffering from a shoulder injury and may not play in his selected reserve role for the AL, could tie Musial's record of 24 All-Star Game appearances if he does play.

Omaha - The 59th Nebraska Women's Amateur Golf Association's championship meet will carry a "Hard Times-Good Times" theme --- hard times one may have on the golf course and good times cultivating friendships.

While there will be some "hard times" on the golf course, host pro Max Crouch of the Omaha Field Club, where the tournament will be contested. believes the ladies will like the cozy layout.

The Field Club will play to a par 67 and a length of 5,380 to 5,-400 yards, but it won't be easy. Straight tee shots will be a necessity.

Lahners Grabs Beatrice Win

Beatrice - Jerry Lahners recovered from what could have been a costly spinout to win the A Feature and retain his point standings leadership at Beatrice Speedway Saturday night.

With the A Feature restarted and delayed five times before the first five laps had been finished, Lahners still managed to move quickly into the lead and hold it for six laps, before a spinnout knocked him out of first and gave the lead to Dan Reed of Bennett, who had earlier won the Speed Dash.

But Lahners worked his way back over the dusty track to catch Reed three laps from the end and win the Gauge County Fairground's final race, topping 36 other drivers for the top spot. First Heat - 1 Tom Watts, Lincoln, 2.

AAA Lead To SAM'S

The league's leading hitter for 1974, Alex Walter, claimed the top batting position for the first time this year the past week, as he raised his average to .590.

In the league races, SAM'S clung to a narrow one-game lead over Arjay Advertising in the Western Division, despite having lost their last three games. The two teams will square off at 8 p.m. Thursday.

In the Eastern Division, Colonel Sanders holds a comfortable 21/2 game advantage over Barry's Tavern.

Missouri River Going Through Undesireable Changes

'They've put the Missouri River in a strait jacket and the result has been the loss of thousands of acres of fish and wildlife habitat.

That's the gist of a newlypublished study on the Missouri River by John Funk, recently retired chief of Missouri's Fisheries Research for the Department of Conservation. and John Robinson, biologist with the Department

"Radical changes have been inpressed upon the surging brown Missouri River in the vears since Lewis and Clark threaded their boat up a sprawling river studded with islands and sunken timber." say the biologists.

The examples of habitat loss along the river are horrifying to a hunter or fisherman. In distance alone from the mouth of the Missouri to Rulo, Nebraska, the river has lost 45 6 miles in the past 93 years or more than eight per cent of its former length

"The rate of loss apparently has accelerated," the biologists say. "Between 1954 and 1972, 16 4 miles were lost. The average rate has been one-half mile a year.`

In 1954, an average mile of river had 138 acres of water. so more than 4,000 acres have been lost in 75 years by river shortening - an area equal to more than half of Pomme de Terre Reservoir.

The two measured the loss of water area at 50,588 acres between 1879 and 1954, because of structures to make the river flow in a narrower channel, with a faster current.

An additional 10,244 acres of total of 60,832 acres which is 50 per cent of the original surface area of the Missouri and as much surface water as there is in Lake of the Ozarks.

Islands vanished — dikes closed the chutes between the island and shore and the chutes filled in. Some 98 per cent of the islands acreage is gone.

Generally, the islands, which had been fine wooded wildlife habitat, have been cleared. The chutes were nursery and resting areas for aquatic species and were favored fishing areas. They are gone.

The islands originally were in public domain, but the filled-in land has been annexed by adjoining landowners. The loss of public land is nearly 67,000

"The loss of the islands is a loss to recreational opportunity in both fisheries and wildlife and a loss to the diversity of the river environment," say Funk and Ropinson.

Robinson has been working on the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers for 10 years, much of it working with commercial fishermen who have seen many changes as the river has changed. Paddlefish, sturgeon and blue catfish, once common, all have declined, while carp and channel catfish have increased.

"The circumstantial evidence of a direct relationship between decreased habitat diversity and decreased fish population diversity is very strong," says Robin-

Wildlife has suffered heavily as the river and associated wetlands has shrunk. Pioneer records show an abundance of wildlife, much of which rapidly vanished or declined as Missouri was settled.

Species dependent on backwaters and sloughs, such as beaver, muskrat and raccoon, are gone from the steep, sandy shores of the present-day

Just before the turn of the century, a book, "Where to Hunt American Game," mentioned the superb waterfowl hunting on the Missouri.

Although there still is good waterfowl hunting on occasion, it's a shadow of what it once

"The 60,832 water surface acres lost," Funk says, "is more than five times the water area of Swan Lake National Wildlife Refuge, Fountain Grove Wildlife Area, Squaw Creek National Wildlife Refuge, the August A. Busch Memorial Wildlife Area and Trimble Wildlife Area all of which are on or near the Missouri River.

"The river is essential to waterfowl, but the habitat it provides now is far from satisfactory."

The report summarizes a river almost destroyed as fish and wildlife habitat. Islands, chutes and sloughs are gone, snags removed. "The fishery, a bountiful resource taken for granted and thoughtlessly exploited has declined," the biologists say.

Wildlife likewise has declined.

Funk, who spent 29 yeras studying Missouri's rivers and has earned numerous honors. says about the Missouri, "The Missouri River is an example of what can happen to a great natural resource when the basis for management is narrow and explorative. A select few benefitted greatly at the expense of the broad public good."

Summer Camping

Campers count on hot weather during their camping season but there is a limit to the desirability of warm

The heat this past Fourth of July weekend caught more campers by surprise than anticipated, according to one Nebraska Game and Parks Commission official.

Paul Husted indicated Friday visitation on the Lincoln area's Salt Valley Lake system was typically high for a threeday weekend. But then things warmed up. The scorching weather apparently prompted a number of campers and boaters to pull up stakes and head home to the air-conditioning. The near 100-degree readings were too much to take.

"All the areas were real full Friday, including Fremont, Two Rivers, Louisville, but Saturday and Sunday they weren't as full as on a normal weekend," Husted said. "I'm not sure what it was but the heat probably had a lot to do with it."

Beat The Heat

Veteran campers know methods of beating the heat in situations like these. But even a few of the normal tricks can't spare the suffering when temperatures hit the threefigure mark. Some of the tricks include making good use of shade areas. Trees offer a natural air-conditioner, especially if they are located in an area where a breeze would be permitted

Camping near the water also helps keep things cooler, again with aid of a healthy breeze, but without the wind, campers often subject themselves to mosquito infestation.

Insure your tent or camper (without its own airconditioner) is well ventilated. I've found pointing the largest windows toward the south or southwest when making camp allows for the best use of normal summer breezes.

Campers with air-conditioned recreational venicles should still make use of shaded areas when possible to prevent overwork for your cooling unit.

Still Too Hot?

If you've tried all the above hints and it's still too hot, maybe the camper migration back home (as occurred last weekend) is in order.

If you can't beat the heat, there's no sense in suffering or subjecting the family to excessive sunburn or even heat stroke. There are few things which can sap energy out of a person faster than a boiling sun.

Boaters should also take warning, as well as bank fishermen, hikers, backpackers and other summertime outdoor activities. Try not to overwork yourselves in this type of Drink lots of liquid. Your body dehydrates rapidly. Be aware of heat stroke symptoms and treatment by checking with your family doctor or the Red Cross.

Campers wait all winter long for warm weather to enjoy their favorite outdoor activity. Right now, many would settle for near freezing temperatures, or at least a little rain on the

Cranes Delay Highway Work Jackson, Miss. (UPI) - The ment in south Mississippi, will

National Wildlife Federation is making the plight of the Mississippi Sandhill Crane a may determine the future of other endangered species in the United States.

The Federation and its Mississippi affiliate are attempting to invoke the U.S. Endangered Species Act of 1973 to force the Mississippi Highway Department to make major changes in a short stretch of Interstate 10 that will cut through the heart of the rare birds' 40,000-acre nesting area.

Only 40 of the vanishing cranes remain in the south Mississippi marshlands and the Federation fears I-10 will serve as a wedge to open the vast expanse of undeveloped land to industry and agriculture, which would spell the doom of the shy birds.

Although bids for the 5.7 mile stretch of highway have been opened, the MHD has agreed to delay actual construction of the $9.8 million project until a federal suit is acted upon in U.S. District Court.

The suit asks that the Department sacrifice an interchange scheduled to be built where I-10 crosses a small state highway bordering the cranes' "critical habitat." It also asks that a section of the highway that directly threatens several crane nests be moved 200 yards southward and that approximately 10,000 acres of marshland be purchased as part of a refuge for the birds.

Paul Ott, president of the Mississippi Wildlife Federation and a familiar folk singer in the south, says the case is the first in which the Endangered Species Act has been used to try to alter a federal highway.

"The law says federal money and federal people will not jeopardize the critical habitats of endangered species," Ott said in an interview.

"I personally feel that this is a test case and if we don't win it they're gonna' say 'to hell with the rest of the birds and wildlife.' There's got to be a stopping place and this is it."

But state highway director E. L. Boteler claims that the section of interstate, cited as a "critical link" in I-10's develop-not disturb the cranes.

'We have no desire to do any harm to the sandhill cranes, federal case, the results of which Boteler declared. He said the MHD's environmental staff had prepared a two-inch-thick impact statement that led to a highway designed to be compatible with its environment.

"We designed the facility with that (the nesting area) in mind,' Boteler said. "But we were not only conscious of the cranes and other wildlife, we're acutely aware of the traffic congestion in Jackson County as a result of growth on the coast."

Boteler said if the Mississippi sandhill crane becomes extinct, "it won't be because of Interstate 10. It'll be the development that's already started on the coast."

Ott agrees that development will kill the cranes, but he contends that the prime cause of that development would be Interstate 10, specifically the intersection the Federation wants abandoned.

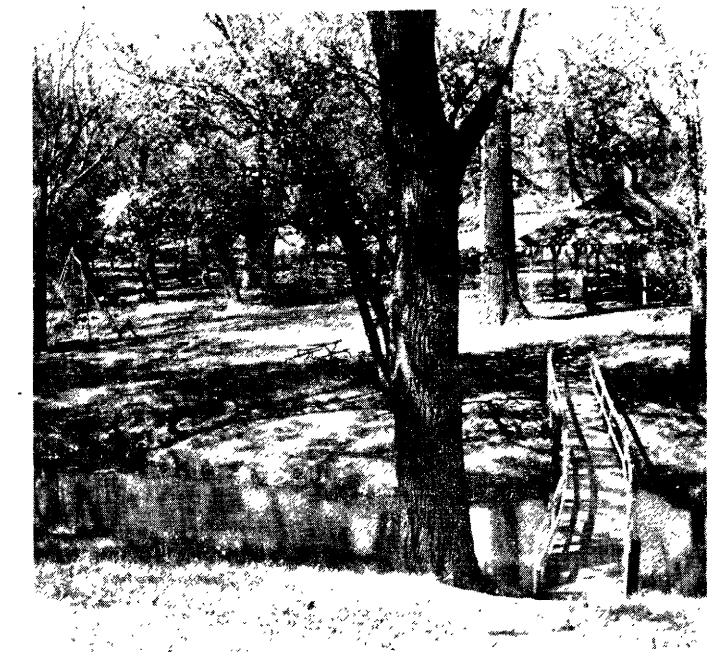

Without that intersection and the easy access it would provide to the cranes' nesting area development of the region would be retarded, perhaps long enough to allow the nature conservancy, the U.S. Interior Department and the state to buy up enough of the land to set up a refuge for the three-foot tall, dark gray birds.

Part of the proposed refuge has already been purchased by the conservancy and the 10,000 acres asked for in the suit would supplement that first purchase. "They don't say who's supposed to come up with the money for that land," Boteler told a visitor, "but you can bet I know who they have in mind. "They want 40,000 acres for 40 birds. Figure that out when figure out how many people we've got in this state for every acre of land," Boteler said.

But Ott is concilatory. "I'm for Interstate 10 one hundred per cent," he said. "We need the tourist industry. But what we're doing is telling everybody we're got the last 40 Mississippi sandhill cranes and then we're getting ready to kill them to get the tourists here."

Heck Memorial Award Initiated

The Mike Heck Award will be initiated this summer at the annual Nebraska Coaches Association All-Star basketball game.

The annual award will memorialize the Creighton University cager who died shortly after the start of the 1974-75

Heck, 7-1, was the only sevenfooter thus far to play in the annual prep cage contest for graduated high school players. He was in ther 1972 game after attending Papillion High.

Bob Morris of Waverly, director of the all-star game, said the award will be given annually to a player "who best reflects the fine character that Mike Heck possessed, and who has made a substantial contribution in some way to the game or basketball in Nebraska."

Heck was starting his third year as a Creighton varsity player when he died in his sleep last winter. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nikolaus Heck of Papillion, will present the first award Aug. 15 during the seventh annual allstar game.

Innovative Layout In Modest Home

By Andy Lang, AP

This two-story design is innovative in its concept, with two bedrooms on the first floor and the main bedroom upstairs. The separation of bedrooms gives the owners complete privacy, creating on their upper floor a kind of suite.

It has three closets, one a walk-in, a dressing table and split bathroom, and a 'library balcony" nook overlooking the entrance foyer below.

The main floor is planned by architects Herman York and relationship, including a pass- across the hall.

through as a serving shelf to the rear private terrace.

A recessed entrance door insures protection at the entry from bad weather. The fover. with its open rail stair leading to the balcony above, is large by any standards.

From the foyer direct access is available to the living room, upstairs, kitchen, bedrooms and garage. The stair to the basement is nearby, directly next to the foyer to kitchen door.

A change in floor level gives definition to the bedroom wing. The two bedrooms on this main Raymond Schenke with the con- floor are completely private, ventional living, dining, kitchen with a split bathroom directly

O'Neill Irrigation Project

Fischer: Fintus Distorting Facts

agricultural economist Loyd K. Fischer contends he is accurate and reduce the amount of water in charging that true costs of the O'Neill Irrigation Project are being understated by project supporters and the government.

In response to Harold Fintus of Gering, president of the Nebraska State Irrigation Assn., who charged that Fischer has "completely distorted the facts" about the O'Neill Project, Fischer said it is really Fintus who is distorting the facts.

Fischer listed several reasons for opposing the O'Neill Project:

-Claims by the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation that the project will enhance the environment are not defensible.

-A 1972 bureau estimate put cost of the irrigation portion of the project at $113 million. But the bureau has a history of cost overruns of 72%, which puts likely completion costs closer to $385 million.

-The project will never succeed in delivering 150,000 acre-feet of water to 77,000 acres of land. Some 23,000 acres of the land is classified as irrigable with severe hazards. And since generation projects.

University of Nebraska only a small portion of the canals are lined, they will leak badly delivered to farms.

> -Justifying project expenditures on the basis that money spent multiplies in benefits is 'economic snake oil." The project impact of $106.6 million, calculated by two NU economists, cannot automatically be assumed to be beneficial.

-The money paid back by users of water from the irrigation project won't even pay the interest cost of money needed to build the project, let alone the principal cost. Even if it is assumed the irrigation portion could be built for $113 million, with interest at 6%, the interest cost would be about $80 an acre each year. Yet the bureau's most recent estimates for water charges are $11 to $15 per acre

-Citizens won't have to pay for the project through higher tax bills Instead, they'll pay for it through higher electric bills since costs above what irrigators would repay will be picked up through revenues from the bureau's hydro-electric power

Nebraskans View Arkansas Doctor Program

Fort Smith, Ark. (UPI) — Nebraska legislators and representatives of the University of Nebraska Medical School toured Arkansas' area health education center program Thursday.

The program is aimed at scattering medical doctors throughout the state, especially in rural areas.

Dr. Robert Sparks, NU Medical Center chancellor, said his state was interested in the Arkansas program because of population similarities of the two states. He said Nebraska had set up a similar program and "it will belo us to understand how , to operate by visiting Arkansas."

The location of this bathing facility eliminates the need for an additional lavatory-toilet, thus saving money in total construction.

A laundry, adjacent to the bathroom plumbing, is convenient to the main floor bedrooms and to the garage. A two-car garage can be planned without changing the exterior appearance to any substantial degree.

The exterior of Design R-124 looks exactly like what it is meant to be: a two-story house with a one-story wing, tied together in a simple roof framing system, more house than quickly meets the eve. The two-story portion appears like one story at the front.

Douglas County Valuation Up

Omaha (AP) - Assessor Frank Bemis says Douglas County's tax valuations increased $197.5 million last year, a 5.5% boost over 1973.

It was the smallest percentage increase since 1969.

The valuations are the basis on which taxes are levied by the city, county, schools, sanitary and improvement districts and other local taxing bodies.

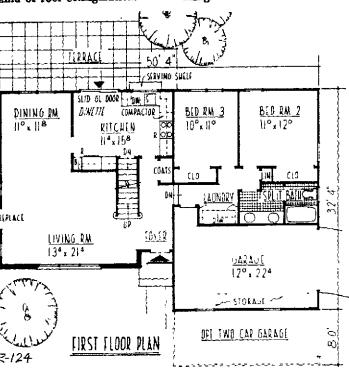

However, much extra upstairs space is obtained by a roof which is raised at the back in what becomes a Dutch dormer extending almost across the entire rear. The roof lines will insure adequate ventilation above the upper ceilings due to the large volume of space near the topmost ridge.

There are clear ceilings throughout the upstairs, a condition unusual in houses with this kind of roof configuration.

Exterior walls are of cedar shingles with some brick at the living room front wall. These shingles may be either of a sawn variety or a light handsplit. The color or stain used can be determined by individual selection, but here restraint is advisable. Elegance is achieved, even in a modest-sized house, by using few colors.

All white trim, doors, cupola, shutters, etc., will contrast well with a dark stain on the cedar

He said the Harlan County dam has had to release very little water for irrigation purposes this year compared to last. He noted that at this time last year the area was already well into 100degree weather and the drouth.

The Norton Reservoir on Prairie Dog Creek, a tributary of the Republican, was so low this spring that his office didn't believe there would be any water available for irrigation at all this year, Patterson said.

THE PRE-OWNED HOME

"Pre-owned" is the common term used for a home you acquire second-hand or fifth (oir even tenth - in the case of a heritage house). According to the National Association of REALTORS®, Americans purchase approximately 3 million homes annually. Of these, some 2½ million are pre-owned homes. What accounts for their popularity?

Beyond the very practical advantages offered by older homes, they exert an emotional appeal as well. Charm is a major factor; so too are individuality and privacy resulting from hedges and full grown trees.

In addition to these intangibles, the older home offers a wider choice of selection. There are approximately two to three times as many existing dwellings as new homes on the market today. However, you should take a careful look at basic systems, such as plumbing, heating and electrical to be sure they are up to current stand-tion in the whole world is people pollution. When it's a plant with many faces. too many people are crowded into too little space. all kinds of bad things begin to happen.

Nebraska Wilds Are Uninhibiting With Exception: Poison Ivy

This is vacation time and, to avoid people pollution, many vacationers are going ever deeper into the wilds. This, unfortunately, can create an entirely different set of problems.

To illustrate, let's consider a well-known, pesky plant - poison ivy. Practically every Nebraskan has seen this plant at one time or another. He's come to recognize its distinctive three leaves, its glossy look. And, of course, knowing it, he can avoid it.

However, when he ventures into unfamiliar country, he may encounter his old enemy in disguise. You see, poison by is that worst of all possi-

Someone has said that the worst kind of polluble pests — it's a variable species. In other words, began to feel uncomfortable.

Poison ivy grows throughout North America, in Mexico, even in the West Indies. Not all poison ivy has glossy leaves. In fact, some develop leaves that are quite dull in appearance.

Moreover, the shape of the leaf may vary from completely round to oval. And the edges of the leaves may be smooth - or "toothed" - or

A Nebraskan who purchased uncleared land in a southern state decided he'd save money by removing much of the underblush himself. When a native told him that poison ivy grew throughout the area, the Nebraskan was especially careful. He studied foliage around him wherever he went.

After spending the better part of a day removing a particularly irritating mass of vines, he Otherwise, Nebraskans can safely walk practically anywhere in their countryside. This simply ain't done in some other states.

For example, the woods in Florida are magnificent — a paradise filled with every conceivable kind of horticultural surprise. But they also contain other, not so pleasant, surprises — for example, deadly poisonous snakes.

In recent years the word, wilderness, has acquired a new meaning. It's now an untrammeled, unspoiled area in which a person can, at long last, escape the teeming crowd and find himself.

The new definition will certainly appeal to most plant lovers. But a couple words of caution before entering wilderness:

(1) If your vacation takes you into unfamiliar terrain, spend a little time reading about its flora and fauna. This will not only keep you out of trouble, but will enhance your enjoyment of this new

(2) Spend a little time chatting with a respected native before venturing out into unfamiliar land. And don't be afraid to ask silly questions. They may save you an awful lot of trouble.

Encourage Cockroaches To Leave the House

Emery Nelson

County Extension Agent

The misconception that cockroaches live only in slums is, of course, blithely ignored by cockroaches.

They move right in whether you are rich or poor, it's all the same to them.

Cockroaches can adapt to almost any living conditions. They carry diseases and filth and should never be a permanent These insects like a good, clean home. Once inside they are not often seen and keep to themselves in dark, damp locations. Only at night do they come out to eat crumbs and spilt food and crawl through the cupboards.

The secret of eliminating these unwelcome guests is to use good sanitary practices and treating with good insecticides.

Insecticides which do a good jol are diazinon, baygon and korlan. These poisons are only applied where cockroaches hide.

Use them around stored boxes, under the refrigerator and stove and other places cockroaches may crawl.

Placement of the insecticidesin the proper location is the only way to be certain you have eliminated the insects.

Caution must be used to assure that the proper strength of insecticide is applied. Be particularly careful to avoid contamination of food or dishes.

Kansas Cudahy Plant Might Reopen in '76

Wichita, Kan. (AP) — Reopening of the Cudahy Co. hog slaughter plant is not expected to come before late 1976, company officials said.

Howard Fisher, chairman of Cudahy, and Bill Roberts, Wichita plant manager, said in a meeting with city officials the plant could be closed until 1977.

The two said prospects for a larger supply of hogs appear better late next year, but it probably will be into 1977 before the Wichita plant is reopened.

The plant halted its kill operations this week and 225 workers were laid off effective Friday.

Mildred Curtis

A Senator's Wife

Success, Paradox Mark Life of Mildred Curtis

Washington — Mrs. Carl Curtis is perceived differently by people.

To one longtime "Curtis watcher," she is a strong person who dominates — and has changed — the life of the junior senator from Nebraska as no one else has ever been able to do.

To many, she is a warm, gracious lady with a deep understanding of and an appreciation for others.

To a congressional aide, after a brief encounter, the second Mrs. Curtis comes across as sugar and spice and everything nice with a bit of Mrs. Goody Two Shoes thrown in for good measure.

To one senator's wife, she is a woman whose gray hairs represent 62 years of accumulated expertise and human experience.

To herself, Mildred Genier Baker Curtis is a person whose "motivation in life is to be alert, effectual, analytical and generous toward humanity."

Parodoxical

Whichever or whatever she may be — and one suspects she is all of them — Mildred Curtis, an outgoing woman with an air of soft dignity that fits the stereotype of a senator's wife, is an interesting collection of paradoxes and apparent contradictions.

- Firmly adhering to the traditional belief that a woman's first place is in the home, with the man as the head, the nucleus of society, she has successfully pursued careers in the business and medical worlds.

— Turned off by the Women's Liberation Movement, she has done things liberated women still only talk about and hope for.

 Convinced women should not compete against men, she headed her own firm in one of the most competitive and cutthroat maledominated industries — and succeeded.

"I believe in being feminine," the matronly Mrs. Curtis said. "The strength of a woman is to be feminine but that doesn't mean to say she lacks strength to achieve anything she wishes in life if she has the courage and honest ability."

Aware that her candor could be misconstrued, she added, "A woman is not less than a man, but she is not a woman without a man. I do not feel a woman is inferior to a man. Therefore, I do not think it is necessary to go out and prove I am equal to a man."

In the first minutes of the interview — months in arranging and the first in-depth close-up of a woman few Nebraskans know — Mildred Curtis sounds dangerously like a parody of one of those made-in-Hollywood movies of a made-in-heaven romance.

Center Stage

A reporter — at first — gets the disconcerting feeling he's watching a performance by an actress who knows she's on center stage:

"I consider it a great privilege to be married to this man... I revere him... I never disagree with my husband. Our philosophies are the same. We are both children of pioneers and the philosophies taught to us as children and in our lives are almost identical. They support each other," she said.

"A senator's wife makes no decisions. Her chief importance is to make the senator feel he is achieving something on his own . . . seeing that he is well cared for because of the demands made on him."

But then comes the impression that this is not a put-on, a public relations ploy, but is deep and genuine. She's as natural as water and her loyalties and feelings run fierce and deep, akin to those of her husband. She will speak no ill of her first husband. Curtis memorializes his first wife, Lois who died in 1970, with equal listing in the official Congressional Directory and with flowers on her grave on the anniversary of her death.

Mildred Curtis has been married to the senator since December 1, 1972. She downplays her role — "I am the vice president. He the president who makes the decisions" — but it is clear that in her own way she has been responsible for Curtis' metamorphosis from drabness to a certain flair in from drabness to a certain flair in dress and in outlook on life.

Mrs. Curtis lists as achievements "success in the business world, the medical world and an ability to maintain a high level of physical and mental health."

She acknowledges she has had "some devastating things in my personal life." She seems ready to talk about them if forced but says she has never felt self-pity.

"I have made courage the essence of my thinking," she said."

Canadian-Born

Courage and self-reliance were the basics she learned from her French-Scotch parents in St. Albert, Ontario, where she was born in 1913, the youngest of nine children (four brothers and four sisters).

Her father supervised the laying of the first telegraph lines in British Columbia in 1884 and later operated the first power plant in Hudson Bay country.

She came to the United States in 1947, at age 34, settling in Denver where she attended nursing and senior accounting courses at the University of Colorado. Shortly after marrying B. H. Baker, a construction superintendent, they formed their own construction company. He ran the field operations; she ran the management

She assumed full control after filing for divorce in 1960. Selling out in 1964, she returned to nursing, this time at Stanford University in Palo Alto, Calif., and was on the operating room staff during this country's first heart transplant operation.

Mildred Baker first met the Curtises in 1958 through mutual friends, the Floyd Dotys of Minden. The Bakers had been low bidder on the construction of the new Air Force Academy

Housedress Makes Comeback

By Kathy Moore

The word housedress often conjures thoughts of a frumpy, wrinkled, sad sack look, hardly fit for around home and certainly not to wear in public.

But good news. For the women who still prefers dresses to slacks there is something casual, but not sloppy, and not just a modified robe.

The modern housedress, although perfect for just lounging at home, is not beyond making a trip downtown or becoming a work dress for the woman supplementing family income.

Merchants agree the housedress is not a dead item and many women ask for them.

Julie Bobolz, salesperson at Hovland Swanson, said women look for lightweight casual dresses that usually hit about mid-knee.

Zippers and snaps are popular, she said, and something that unfastens the entire length of the dress is more convenient

There are two basic styles, according to Ms. Bobolz, A smock-type look that is a little more relaxed and usually unbelted. This is especially suitable for natio wear.

This is especially suitable for patio wear.

The second look is more fitted, has varying sleeve lengths and is sometimes loosely belted.

New styles this year feature elbowlength sleeves, stand-up collars and belts that wrap twice around the waist.

National designers are getting into the casual dress market, too. Designer Leo Narducci said the housedress is coming into its own, partly because of more efficient household appliances which cut down chores and have changed the way a woman goes about them.

He feels women's house clothes don't have to be work clothes, calculated to take rough wear and tear, unless they're painting the walls.

Most of the neat stylish looks come in cotton blends or knits, made for easy wear and care.

Prints and solids abound, with a light denim look leading this year's materials. Prices for the casual dresses range from about $16 to $30.

A View: Man Behind Woman

By Linda Ulrich

Behind every good woman stands a man. What better proof than Dudley Bailey, husband of City Councilperson Sue Bailey?

"For a long time, she was Mrs. Dudley Bailey. Now it's my turn to be Mr. Sue Bailey," he said.

Of course Dudley is a person in his own right. He is professor of English at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and was department chairman for 10 years. Of his wife's career, he said, "I'm tickled pink. It's totally pleasant from my point.'

But then, he added, "we've enjoyed whatever we've done." Their enjoyment is so great, in fact, that they don't take vacations. "We like what we do. Who needs a vacation? We like life as we find it," Dudley saud.

"Quarreling" is an important part of their lives. Following the adversary tradition. Dudley says one of his functions is to tell Sue her views are wrong. "We've lived together so long we know how much fun it is to quarrel," he said.

In or out of the classroom, Dudley tries to be as cantankerous as he can. "I pick on the other person's point and hope they respond with spirit."

That's important, he said, because "it's always the starting point of discovering what you think about things.'

Quarreling is healthy, good and fun, he said. "We must learn to live with discord . . . we must have conflicting views. We must learn to live with them and love them.'

Maturity

The definition of maturity, according to Dudley, is possessing the ability to separate people from their notions. We're supposed to love people, not love their notions. Perfectly fine, honorable, intelligent just people can have notions different from yours."

And, "you shouldn't expect people to like your notions either because they may not be very likable.

"Life isn't going to go away and leave us alone," he said. "We should be thankful for whatever stirs our intellect, imagination and emotions. And emotions are the seat of this. It helps if you can get mad about something."

Accompanying Dudley's support of quarreling is his theory on the "blessedness of being wrong."

"Oh gee, we do so want to be right. We'd rather be right than president," he said. But, "the insistence on being right is a terrible thing. It's a marvelous thing to discover you're wrong and to learn to take it with good grace.'

Discovering you're wrong means freeing you from foolishness and a chance for growth — a chance to discover that "maybe everything I know I don't know at all."

Learn to Live

If there is anything "wrong" with college campuses, Dudley thinks it's the lack of "a real willingness to haul off and try something." He'd like to see greater openness and greater encouragement of ideas, on the part of both students and faculty.

"There ought to be some place in the university for people who want to prepare to be human beings," he said. "For the most part, schools do not direct attention to learning how to live.

Dudley believes that one of the most important lessons to be learned is how to use the senses. "Terrible food, cruddy fabrics" are reminders that civilization falls short in teaching people to use their basic senses. "My wife slowly taught me how to see. Phonograph records taught me how to hear - civilization has no prespect for sound. If your wife's a good cook, you'll happily learn to use your tongue."

Intelligent pursuits are rather beautiful things but "we do want to be serious about it.'

All you get if you are serious is a belly ache, he said. You ought to feel how much fun it is to learn.

Educational Restructuring

Dudley thinks the classroom should be a joyous place and it will become joyous only if there is radical restructuring of the

"The department is the most serious problem in the contemporary university," he said. "I think the fundamental problems aren't going to be solved until we get rid of the departmental stranglehold.

act was to dissolve the department of English, I'd embrace him publicly. And I was chairman of the department at the time." Dudley also is bothered by the organization of learning into

"When Melvin George became dean, I told him if his first

50 minute class periods. "No one will argue that it's convenient but convenience of operation may get in the way of learning."

He believes that freshman English should not be a required course - "mandatory courses are educational tomfoolery of the And grading is "a lot of nonsense."

There has to be a better way to organize the university's energies, he said. "We desperately need some genius to come and shake the place up.' Dudley received his A.B. and M.A. degrees from the University of Kansas City and his Ph.D. from the University of

Egg Substitutes Great Nutritionally But Fall Short in Taste

Ideal for Restricted Diets

By Kathy Moore

It's no voke High cholesterol in food is not a laughing matter.

There is a definite association between a high level of cholesterol in a person's blood stream and cardiovascular diseases, according to Dr. Hazel Fox, nutrition specialist and professor at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

One way of cutting some of that cholesterol from your diet is by using egg substitutes.

The egg yolk, Dr. Fox said, is one of the highest sources of cholesterol, an average one containing 275 miltigrams (mg). An equivalent amount of an egg substitute contains only a trace. They are reportedly nutritionally equal.

Two egg substitutes, Egg Beaters and Second Nature, are available to Lincoln

They were developed in response to the growing number of people on restricted

'Eggsactly' Right

troduced on the market about a year ago,

they were "eggsactly" what the doctor

Nutritionists generally agree the average person should eat no more than two or three eggs a week to keep that cholesterol count down.

Advertised to contain "all the delicious taste of the freshest farm egg," these substitutes do not resemble eggs.

Frozen in 16-ounce cartons, each container holds the equivalent of about eight eggs. Manufacturers recommend thawing substitutes in the refrigerator, then using them within seven days.

Priced at 95¢ to 99¢ a carton, they run higher than a carton of a dozen grade A large eggs, which now sell for about 63¢. You get the equivalent of only eight eggs, but a lot less cholesterol for the price.

Reportedly, the egg substitutes can be scrambled, beaten, fluffed and cooked almost like the real thing with the same taste results.

The Taste Test

But Dr. Gary Miller, assistant professor When these substitutes were in- in the UNL home economics department,

He tried using these substitutes in the classroom to determine if foods containing eggs satisfactorily retained taste when made with egg substitutes.

He reports they worked fine - up to a point. It depended on the role the eggs played in the make-up of the food.

As a batter mix or as an added ingredient, there were no problems. "You couldn't tell them from the real thing,"

A Difference

But when eggs were the main ingredient in a recipe, such as a souffle, there was a difference. "It didn't foam as much and the taste just wasn't the same," he said.

Another recipe, Greek lemon soup, got negative results. "There was an offflavor. Maybe I would call it an aftertaste," he said.

He concluded the substitutes were successful only to a certain degree but were ideal for those who couldn't have eggs in their diets. "It's impossible to substitute anything and get exactly the same results," he said.

Sales Varied

A check with local stores got varying results on the products' sales.

Allan Noddle, Hinky Dinky vice president of sales and merchandising said they have been selling "terrifically." He said at first the products did not "jump right off the shelf" but they have been catching Noddle thinks the reason is "people are concerned about the cholesterol factor." He added one way to tell how successful they have been will be the introduction by the manufacturer of a second size.

"That is the point when they think they can produce a bigger size economically, he said. "They are ready to take a little risk with a more successful product."

Denny Bissell, grocery merchandising manager for Fleming Food Co., the wholesaler for local IGA stores, said the products were not selling "outstandingly" in their stores.

He said egg substitutes seemed to do better when they were first introduced but credited that to advertising campaigns by manufacturers.

Lincoln General Hospital is celebrating its 50th year, and, my, how things have changed. When it opened in March of 1925, a Lincoln newspaper reported:

"Lincoln General Hospital, the city's new, $400,000 hospital at Seventeenth and Sewell streets, will be formally opened for public inspection . . .

During the last half-century, the city-owned hospital, supported by revenue from services to patients, has moved into a new building and grown extensively.

It has grown from 89 employes to 568 fulltime and 266 part-time employes, from 49 physicians on the attending staff to 106, from 114 beds to 262 beds and 40 bassinets.

Its rates have grown, too. From $5.40 a day, $1 a day for a charity case, to $58 a day for semiprivate room.

Today, there are parking stalls for 555 cars. And visitors are charged a quarter to park in the hospital lot.

"The new building, when viewed from outside, has many attractive features which should help to dispel some of the popular dread of Lincoln General's first building, erected at the corner of 17th and Sewell at a cost of $400.-000 is quite a change in appearance and atmosphere from the hospital's second building, opened in 1967 at 2300 So. 16th. That building cost $6.7 million.

Services have changed, also. Recently, Lincoln General opened a surgicenter where minor surgery is conducted on a walk-away basis. It also has started a rooming-in program for new mothers. Under such an arrangement, a newborn stays with the mother in her room where the new mother actually cares for the child.

"The enclosed porch and three stories of screened porches on the south side give it the appearance of a place to get well in rather than a place to be taken as a last resort . . .

There are other changes too in the last 50 years. When Lincoln General first opened, its laundry was done in what was called the hospital's sweat room. Today, the hospital's laundry is trucked to Omaha.

In the early years, linens and uniforms were usually white. Today, nurses gowns may be green or yellow, Raggedy Anns adorn the sheets in the pediatrics ward.

In still other ways, Lincoln General is trying to humanize medical care. A floor hostess program began last week. Under such a program, a hostess is assigned to a floor where she visits daily with the patients.

A floor hostess stops by a patient's room just to chat, not to administer a shot or give a pill, Hobbin Wolfe, public relations director, explained.

In another possible change, the hospital is considering a move to hire a patient representative who would investigate patient complaints.

It's all part of the hospital's attempt to humanize hospital care.

Angry and put off by the Colorado congressional delegation, the Bakers appealed to Curtis who arranged a Pentagon conference. She said the generals were surprised to see a woman and even though they said she had made a convincing case, "it didn't do any good because we are not changing our minds."

She threatened to go to the newspapers if they didn't get the contract. "We fought for our rights," she said, "I guess I sounded extremely pugnacious."

For whatever reason, the Pentagon backed off and the Bakers got the con-

This determination is the precept "applied all the way through my life: You can succeed only if you have the courage and strength of your convictions.

After her divorce and the death of the senators first wife, the Dotys got them back together at what Mildred Curtis says was the right time, the right place and "the right chemistry."

"Marrying a senator," Mrs. Curtis said, "is like marrying into any other profession from the standpoint that it requires a certain amount of discipline in life. Definitely, you can make a success of it or falter."

Hers is a tightly structured life. bound within the senator's comings and goings. She's usually up at 6:30 a.m., has coffee and breakfast with Curtis, discusses the day's activities, sees him off, straightens the house, has lunch downtown, returns in the

serve the meals which she prepares. On the executive committees of the Republican Wives Club and Ladies of the Senate, an organization of senatorial wives who meet each Tuesday to roll bandages and sew garments for the Red Cross, Mrs. Curtis is also active in the bipartisan Congressional Club and the International Neighbors Number One Club. a prestigious, by-invitation-only group of diplomatic, cabinet and congressional wives.

She also holds presidential appointments to the National Advisory Council on Education Professions Development which meets four times a year and the Midwest Regional Advisory Council of the National Parks Service which meets three times annually. For each meeting she attends, she receives $35 plus travel expenses.

Mrs. Curtis underscores her appointments developed because of her background in business and nursing, not because she's the wife of a United States senator. Curtis' office said the senator used no influence in getting her the appointments.

She openly admits, however, that being a senator's wife has opened doors in Washington that would be normally closed to others.

But it is hard to think that Mrs. Curtis would have taken on the additional tasks if she didn't feel she could make a worthwhile contribution.

Aside from correcting errors, today's success is mainly a matter of finding the simplest course and sticking to it. It's a fine date to start on a new job or fresh enterprise.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: One word provokes more on any side. Be sure you know what you're talking about before you begin; otherwise ask questions and listen. Bargains are available now in many lines.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Bickering tapers off if you let go of the issue momentarily. Home improvement is within convenient range, but get an okay from all who use the premises before making any changes.

Dear Mr. Corn: I tried duplicate for the first time and really found it mostly fun and excitement. We did cause an incident in our use of Gerber. The opponents protested that we had not listed the convention on our convention card. What conventions belong on a convention card?

Duplicate Bug Colorado Springs

Answer: All conventions and treatments not part of "standard bridge" should be shown on the appropriate part of the convention card. Joe Amsbury of England's Popular Bridge magazine relates this humorous story: A lady used a conventional bid not listed on her card When the omission was pointed out, the lady replied, Of course it's not on the card. # Case of Sudden Retirement

"Well, this is R-day," said Bill, as he returned from the office. He meant that he had been given early retirement. Just like Anne didn't say much. She went to the desk drawer, pulled out the green filing envelope and one of their bank books.

'You can go to the bank tomorrow on your way to work and get those government bonds out of the safe deposit box, cash them in, and deposit them in checking," she said.

"Okay," said Bill, "and, meanwhile, tonight I think I'll call the real estate agent down in Florida and tell him to have the house ready for us to move into in about, what do you say, two months?"

'I'll give notice on this place tomorrow," Anne nodded. "And I'll start getting the things together that we want to dispose of at the garage sale

Bill sat down at the desk and made out a subscription order for the newspaper in Florida "Might as well start getting it now," he said, "and we'll know about the stores near the house and then they have the services at that church you thought you'd

There was just one more thing to do Drop a note to those businessmen Bill had contacted on one of their winter trips down and see what could be lined up in the way of part-time

Advance Planning

Bill and Anne slept fine that night Because they had managed to convert the unexpected into the expected.

How? By advance planning

If you are still working, and looking forward to a day five or ten years off when you will leave the salt mines and apply for your social security, do like Bill and Anne

Have an emergency plan - for early retirement. Avoid the upset and the shock by knowing what you want to do and being ready for it.

It's going to cost you something to readjust, so realize that and have a fund set aside that you don't touch Government bonds are good because you will get adequate interest and you won't be inclined to use the money on something you don't real-

If you are going to stay in the same area, $1,500 will probably take care of your conversion fund. If you're going to Florida, like Bill and Anne, or to some other state better make it $3,000 because of travel, deposits, and the like

Job Possibilities

Know where you will be living and, if at all possible, have it bought and mostly paid for

Do a lot of pre-retirement exploring of job possibilities or, at least, time-occupying possibilities. Talk to people at your new base so that you can approach them when the time comes as something other than a stranger. You can do much of this scouting work during your vacations

Make advance lists of what you want to get rid of and what you want to keep in household items and personal belongings.

Sit down and draw up an R-day plan just like you do in your business. Type or print it neatly on 81/2 x 11 paper and put it in your strongbox - but take it out frequently for reference and checking

Be ready and early retirement shock will never hit you (c) National Newspaper Syndicate

Official high-level delegations from the National Conference of Catholic Bishops in the U.S.A. and the Synagogue Council of America, the umbrella agency of Conservative, Orthodox, and Reform congregational and rabbinic bodies, met a full day recently at the House of Living Judaism in New York to explore "The Sanctity of Human Life."

In his introduction, Rabbi Henry Siegmen, executive vicepresident of the Synagogue Council, commented that "even Jews who are most liberal in their religious attitudes toward abortion share with Roman Catholics a profound concern about the practical consequences for the sanctity of human life of a policy that admits of no moral restraints." Rabbi Siegman added that the Jewish community must concern itself with issues of importance to the Christian faiths.

"Jews have asked Christians to understand our passion for Israel's survival," he said. "The Catholic church has a right to expect a serious hearing on issues that it considers of prime

More Do-Gooders Needed, Says Rev. Haggai Boy Scout Official: Sarcasm Is Tribute

By George W. Cornell

New York (AP) - Cynics sometimes aneer at the do-gooder impulse of the Boy Scouts of America, but the organization's new national director of manpower regards the sarcasm as a tribute.

"It's a matter of being secure enough to accept it as a compliment," says the Rev. Thomas S. Haggai. "Being a de-gooder is something to be proud of. What we need is more do-gooders doing some good."

Haggai, 44, a Baptist minister called the "Messenger for God in the Marketplace" because of his extensive lectures before business groups, took over this spring as supervisor of adult leaders of the free world's biggest organization of boys.

"Some people may thumb their nose at our cultivating kindness, yet they want a kind society," he said. "They want the privilege of spoofing us, but they also want the kindness we defend for them in the

'I'm Corny'

A genial and hearty champion of the Scout-instilled ideals to be trustworthy, loyal, kind, helpful, obedient, cheerful, courteous, straight-thinking, friendly, brave, clean and reverent, Haggai observed

"I tell audiences I'm corny, I tell them I'm square, that I speak for the square virtues." But this outlook, he said, has come to touch a responsive chord among the young and invariably now draws big applause from college students.

"The Ten Commandments are coming back in style," he said. "It's a real return.

Kids are recycling, reclaiming the old values. A year from now, they're going to be in shirts and ties while their elders are in leisure suits."

Haggai, in charge of development and training of the 4,500 professional staff members and 1.5 million adult volunteers overseeing the Scouts, said the movement is based on the biblical commandments and teachings revealed to Moses.

Aim: Build Faith

The objective for the young people involved — currently 4.3 million of them — is to build faith in their Creator, dedication to country and determination to serve fellow human beings.

About 65% of the 160,000 Scout units are set up through churches and synagogs on a nonsectarian basis.

Concerning occasional past criticism that the Scout movement tended to equate godliness with Americanism, Haggai said the Scouts increasingly have broken free of that implication, recognizing that genuine regard for country can demand criticism of its conduct.

Left Standing

"We're not just flag-waving superpatriots," he said. "In a sense, the nation and its mores have moved away from us and left us standing there. But while the culture may go its way, we still believe the survival of the country depends on vital principles, on ideals that sometimes stand against the country's behavior.

'We have our own track. We don't say, 'Love America or leave her,' but, rather, 'Love America and improve her.'

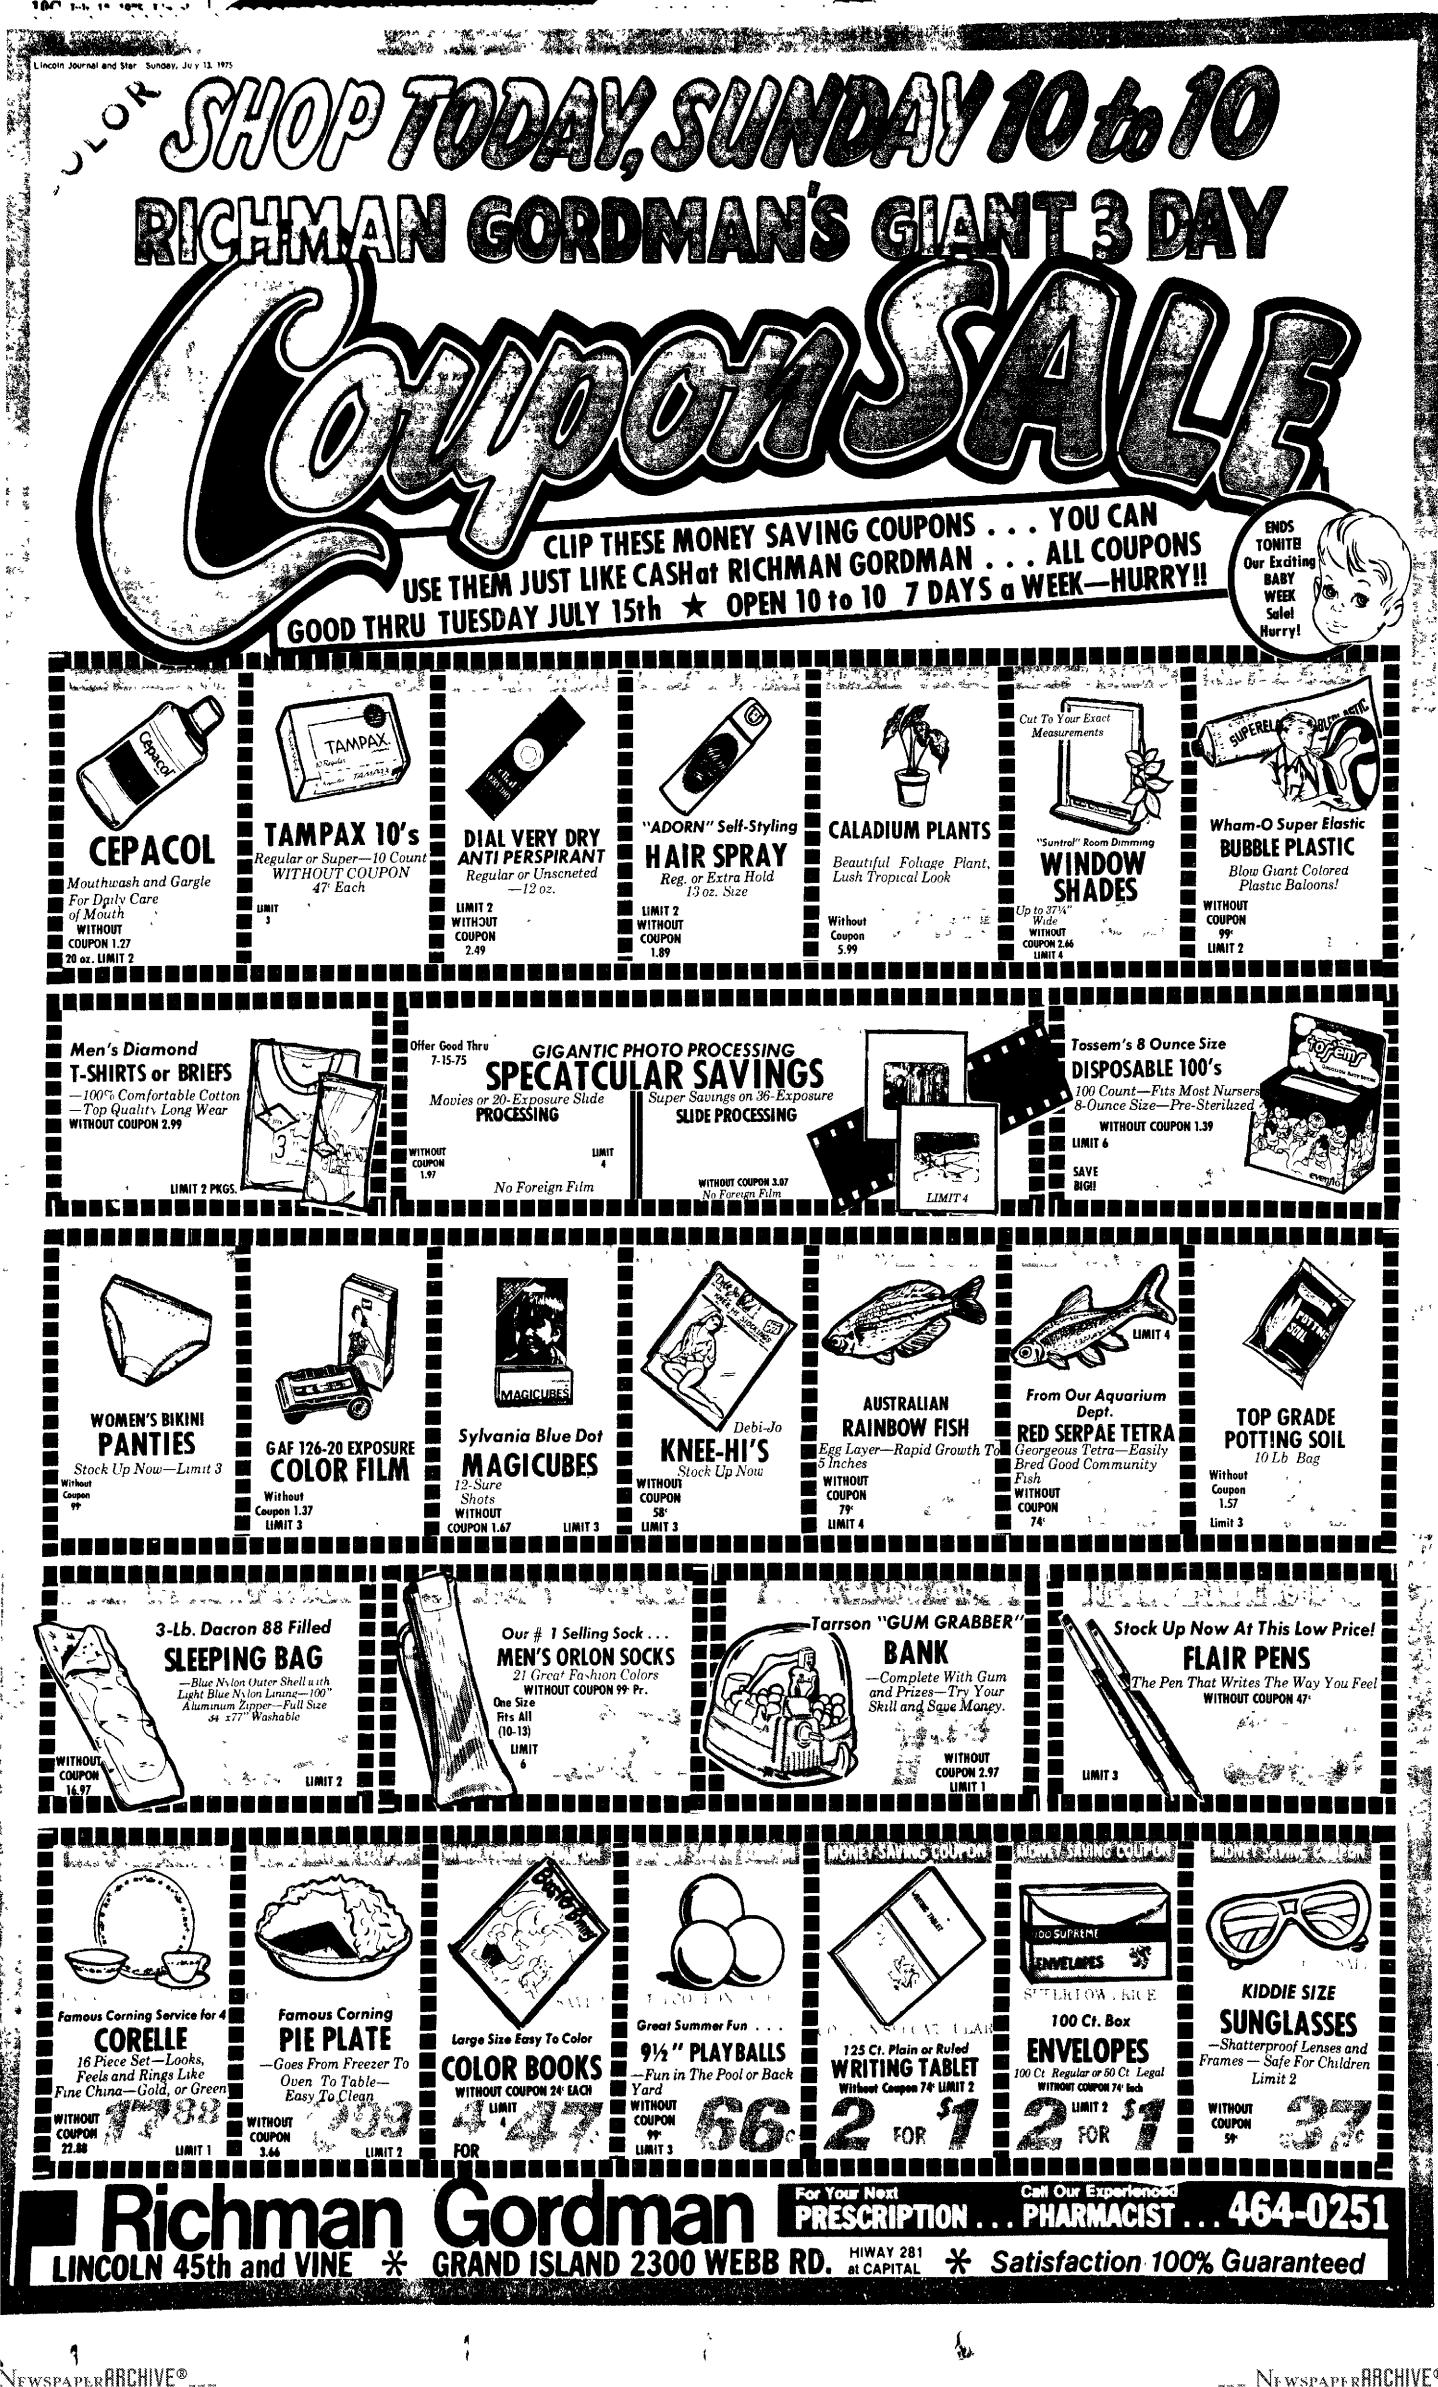

Haggai was born in Halamazoo, Mich.,

and has led congregations in Rock Hills, S.C., and High Point, N.C. He now makes his base at national Scout headquarters in North Brunswick, N.J.

The organization has a national budget of $14 million, and of $102 million for its 428 local councils, about half is raised through united community drives, about half from individual contributors. The Scouts own a 575-acre reserve at Mendham, N.J., for training leaders and have several huge outdoor spreads where youngsters go on trips: canoe bases in Maine, Minnesota, Kentucky and Wisconsin, and a 137,000-acre Scout ranch and explorer bases at Cimarron, N.M.

Henderson Declines Fed Help To Pay Off 14-Bed Hospital

Henderson - Lack of federal and required no state or federal creased because the community funds didn't stop Hendersonites from building their new 14-bed hospital. In fact, they wouldn't have had it any other way.

The Henderson Community Hospital, dedicated last August, will have cost nearly $750,000 by the time the last contractor's bill is received for recent completion of a laundry-room addition.

As of June 19, according to Henderson News editor Jerry Jacobitz. $549,932 has been pleadged by local subscribers, and $487,526 has been collected. Hospital board member Jacob Peters said twice-yearly fund drives will continue, and the target date for complete repayment of the debt is 1977.

After that, Henderson will have one of the few 3-year-old hospitals which carries no debt

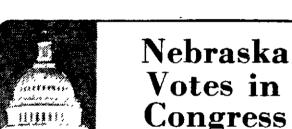

According to hospital building chairman Melvin Goerz, the fund drive has been a success because the hospital "has become more or less a symbol around which the town grew."

Since the original one was built in 1949, he said, Henderson has become "a leader in community affairs."

Support for the new hospital rallied around community pride and a resentment of the "government bureaucracy" which favored centralizing health facilities in York, Goerz noise and may possibly contribute to the destruction of the earth's ozone layer. Congress, they said, already canceled federal subsidies for development of an American SST because of the noise and the American people should not have to be annoyed by noise from foreign-built SSTs.

Opponents said Congress should not ban the SSTs, but should permit the Federal Aviation Administration to complete its investigation into whether they can land and take off without causing problems for persons living near airports.

Voting not to prohibit funds for SST operation: McCollister (R), Smith (R), Thone (R).

Naval Oil Reserves. The House rejected 102-305, an Armed Services Committee proposal to maintain military control over naval petroleum reserves and to restrict reserve production to no more than 300,000 barrels of oil per day for three years.

The House later passed a bill authorizing creation of national petroleum reserves in which these naval reserves could be included — under Interior Dept. supervision.

Advocates argued the naval reserves were set aside for wartime use by the military and should be protected for that purpose. They pointed out that the last time the interior Dept. had control over these reserves, the Teapot Dome scandal of the 1920's resulted, involving bribery of Interior Dept. officials by oil companies.

Opponents argued that oil produced from the naval reserves could reduce the national dependence on imports and provide a ready reserve for the nation, including the military, in time of emergency. They added that safeguards had been provided against another Teapot Dome affair.

Voting to end military control over oil reserves: McCollister (R), Smith (R), Thone (R).

White House Staff. By 157-234, the House rejected a move to freeze the size of President Ford's top-level White House staff at the present 54 positions. The House subsequently approved by voice vote a bill authorizing as many as 95 positions, although the administration said it did not intend to seek funds to fill Supporters of the freeze argued that large increases in the number of key White House staff jobs over the last four decades had led to an "imperial presidency" and had resulted in some of the abuses uncovered in the Watergate scandal. The President should rely more on the Cabinet for advice, they said.

Opponents maintained that modern presidents need large staffs to accommodate the heavy workload thrust upon them by Congress, and that the President needs the flexibility to hire more assistants whenever the workload increases further. They said President Ford, by maintaining an "open" White House, has earned congressional trust that he will not abuse the Reduced-Price School Lunches. By 29-61, the Senate rejected an amendment to raise the income eligibility level for reduced-price school lunches by 25% and to mandate that schools with lunch programs offer reduced-price lunches.

Supporters of the change, which would allow reduced-price lunches for children from families with Incomes up to $10,000, argued that it would aid those families currently having the hardest time making ends meet - tax-paying, middle-income families that are not on public assistance.

Opponents countered that the amendment was a misinterpretation of the purpose of the school lunch program as an aid to needy children from families with little or no income who are genuinely unable to buy enough food to meet their needs. They also argued that to spend the additional $200 million required by the amendment would be fiscally irresponsible.

Voting to increase the income eligibility level: Cartis (R), Hruska (R).

Some of the 27 who flunked, reportedly had high scholastic standing in their schools. But members of the commission which administers the test say they're totally unaware of whose papers are being graded or what grades an individual might have

Bar Commission member Lewis Ricketts of Lincoln said. "We identify (their papers) only by number. We have no idea what their (college) grades, were, what their sex is, whether they're black or white or whether they're from Creighton, Nebraska (University), Yale or Harvard.'

however, also have been a bone of contention. Some allege the subjects related to things not taught by the law schools.

Irritation about the exam has led to speculation in some quarters that certain elements of the Nebraska State Bar Assn. (NSBA) are dissatisfied with the present curriculum at Creighton tne UNL and that some questions were included in the recent exam to "put the schools on notice" that Bar members intend to have a say being taught.

All six members of the bar commission strongly deny both of these claims.

Commission member John North of Omaha said the commission reviewed the curriculum at both Creighton and UNL before adding new subjects to the most recent exam - "principally dealing with federal taxation issues.'

The attorney added that, in the commission's opinion, any lawyer practicing in Nebraska should be familiar with those North said that regardless of a law school graduate's grades, some tend to get up-tight about the exam and may miss some questions because of tension.

Commission member Otto Wellensiek of Nebraska City said all of the graduates who took the exam were apprised of the topics to be covered well ahead of the exam. He said law schools were notified of those subjects six months before the tests.

Lincoln commission member Ricketts added that if the exam subjects hadn't been learned by the time the students were notified of the exam topics to be covered, "there are certain ways of getting short courses on them.

"As a matter of fact, I'm afraid our exam is on the easy side. People come from other states to take it in order to practice elsewhere through reciprocity.'

Creighton Law School Dean Steven Frankino, however, said some individuals have told him the last bar exam was "very exacting." He said, "I think that's appropriate."

UNL Law School Dean Henry Grether said he too has heard "ouite a bit of comment" about the recent exam. "I'm going to get a copy of the questions they asked, because I'm curious myself," he said. He tended to discount charges that certain subjects might have been included in the exam to pressure the law schools into revising their curriculum. although he acknowledged some attorneys have expressed criticism in that regard.

Declaring that some of those differences have existed "for the past 30 years," Grether said, 'not a year has gone by without some change in our carriculum." Conceding that "there are the (Nebraska) Supreme Court may do some thinking about this, and it might not be unlikely that the court, the Bar and the law schools will get together to work on the problem." Bar Commission members North, Wellensiek and Ricketts joined with members Charles Baskins of North Platte, James Shamberg of Grand Island and Daniel Jewell of Norfolk in expressing satisfaction with the rapport they've experienced from Nebraska's law schools. "I believe there is room for closer cooperation between the schools and the bar, but I certainly wouldn't charge that the attitude of the deans in the past has been any sort of ivory tower situation," Jewell said.

"I was driving home from work, hit an icy spot and crashed into a pole. The police pulled me from what was left of the car. In today's world of sophisticated communications, it is hard to imagine a time when the town crier was the only available source of news for townspeople. Employed by the town, the lonely town crier was responsible for spreading the word to the citizenry.

The only form of communication which is still as personal as hearing the town crier in the streets is the Classified section of the daily newspaper. This is where private individuals communicate with other individuals in buying and selling situations, in hiring employees or finding jobs, in telling or in asking.

When spreading the word is important to you, count on a low-cost ad in Classified to reach the right people. Placing your ad is easy. Just give us a call.

Old Comic Toys More Than Hobby For Lincoln Man

By Bart Becker

Who can ever forget the Yellow Kid? Or Happy Hooligan? Or Barney Google's pet ostrich Rudy?

Not Kenny Harman whose book Comic Strip Toys has just been published by Wallace Homestead. Harman's apartment is jammed with metal toys depicting comic strip characters dating from the turn of the century.

He has been collecting various antiques since he was 10 years old. Now 29, Harman has discarded substantial collections of guns, cars and art glass to concentrate on "really good Victorian furniture, tin whiskey and tobacco advertising signs and toys."

Besides his comic strip toys collection, Harman has a group of tin toys from the Lehmann Co. of Germany. Lehmann's tin dirigibles were among the most popular toys

Harman says his toy collection is one of the most complete anywhere and his book is the only one of its kind. The text is supplemented by 200 black and white photos and eight pages of color photographs of the toys.

"Richard Outcault created the first American comic strip in 1896," Harman said. "It was the Yellow Kid."

Harman has a rare toy of the Yellow Kid standing in a goat cart.

Happy Hooligan Arrives

"Then the Yellow Kid lost popularity and along came Buster Brown and Happy Hooligan," he said. "Anybody over 50 will remember Happy Hooligan."

Harman's collection includes several Charlie Chaplin toys. "Some people don't realize Charlie Chaplin was in a comic strip. He was always depicted as a tightwad."

After World War I, Barney Google and his pet ostrich Rudy — "he kept eating Barney's hat" — gained popularity.

"There are more toys with Popeye than any other character," Harman said. "The best one is Popeye in an 18inch rowboat. It's a really crazy toy. You wind it up, man, and it would go right across a pond."

Other animated Popeye toys in Harman's collection include one with Popeye boxing Bluto.

More obscure characters preserved in toys include the Toonerville Trolley and Andy Gump.

"Andy Gump was a Depression-era strip," Harman explained. "A lot of people sided with Andy. He represented the common people, potatoes and near beer and all that."

The best known comic strip character, of course, is Mickey Mouse. He burst into the national consciousness as the star of the first sound cartoon, Steamboat Willie, in 1938.

Another category of popular characters came from the science fiction world of Flash Gordon and Buck Rogers. When mankind really began exploring outer space in the early 1960s they faded into history because they weren't futuristic anymore.

Controversial Characters

Two of the most controversial characters were Amos 'n' Andy of the Fresh Air Taxicab Co. of America. The first Amos 'n' Andy toys came out in blackface and "black people just went up in arms," Harman said. The erratic-movement

Traveling Abroad? Here's Help

By Holly Spence

The third trip was a charm! But it took two earlier sojourns to know the ins and outs of extended trips in foreign lands.

Travelers, especially women, tend to take enough clothing to outfit themselves for three times the length of their stay. Fortunately, these days of polyester-wrinkleless and easy care-clothing has made the woman a better traveler, wardrobe wise. These items pack European travels as showers are laundered one night and worn are accustomed to. the next morning.

An easy way to travel is with one color scheme to facilitate the selection of shoes and purses. Coordinate outfits-slacks, skirts, jackets, blouses- are a god-send. And dark clothing is a safer way to travel through some of the dirtier countries. A white coat in London soon turns gray from the coal dust and soot.

Rainware is a must for many Westernized hotels and inns will usually provide all the comforts of home, but if you prefer the less expensive charming overnight places indigenous to the countries, you might lack a few necessities.

It is advisable to pack a small bar of soap for sometimes it doesn't come with the room. And washclothes are often unheard of. My answer to Picture Association of America, said, "I don't think there's any question that the box office for Jaws is larger, for such a period of than any motion picture in history Although comparisons are difficult to make because of differences in the number of theater showings and admission prices, the 1972 hit The Godfather is generally regarded as the previous record holder. Its first-week revenues were $10 million, compared with $14 million for Jaws.

different story. Variety, the show business publication, estimated that attendance dropped 12% during the first four months of the year. Since then, attendance has picked up somewhat and partly offset the earlier declines.

Some industry analysts have attributed the loss of much of last year's growth rate and movie attendance, statistically speaking, to three factors. The Exorcist, The Sting and a few other hits created a high base that makes continued year-toyear gains difficult to achieve; movie attenance tends to slip during the final months of a recession, according to analysis of past economic slides, and there have not until now been any really blockbuster hits, although The Godfather, Part II. The Towering Inferno and several other films have done well at the box office.

Although it remains to be seen how long the Jaws boom will last, Hollywood seems for now to have at least one blockbuster on its hands.

'Funny Lady' No 'Funny Girl'

By Holly Spence

That Funny Girl - Barbra Streisand as Fanny Brice - isn't aging with the anticipated charm and grace in Funny Lady, now showing at Cinema 1.

Funny Lady takes up where Funny Girl left off and Fanny is served with divorce papers from her gambling husband Nicky Arnstein (Omah Sharif). She then marries and divorces Billy Rose, a theatrical wonderboy.

The movie comes off like one of Rose's shows - overproduced. There is only a hint of story line; most of the time is spent showing off eye-boggling production numbers. These show bits, reminiscent of

as Billy Rose

Ziegfield and Berkely, are much too lengthy.

'Bite the Bullet' Needs Sharper Editing Knife

By Holly Spence

The pace of Bite the Bullet. now showing at the Cinema 2, is similar to Gene Hackman's approach to the film's western race. It plods along slowly until the final leg of the journey, then the action begins.

This western centers around a rather unique idea — a 700-horse race sponsored by a newspaper for publicity.

Entered in the long race in addition to Hackman, the last minute cowboy entry, are a-Rough Rider comrade James Coburn along with wandering Ben Johnson who "wants to be someone;" Candice Bergen, a tough but attractive hooker, and smart-aleck kid, Jan-Michael Vincent (Buster and Billie).

Everyone offers a strong characterization, although the first portions of the race become somewhat boring in their repetition. The revealing of characters and script is fairly routine, but Miss Bergen does provide a surprise of sorts along the trail.

Producer-Director Richard Brooks has made effective use of slow motion footage, especially as the two remaining riders inch toward the ribbon.

There are some light and human moments along the trail of this endurance test, but I am bothered by what appears to be depiction of cruelty to some of the horses. Driving horses to death for sport becomes an obsession for some and Hite the Bullet provides some of these instances, even though Hackman is pictured as a gentle man around animals.

The film suffers most from the lack of a sharp editing knife. It is one of the better westerns around, but could have improved with tighter editing. PG.

Vet Keturns

Hollywood (UPI) - Veteran actor Henry Wilcoxon plays a feature role in Against a Crooked Sky, starring Richard Boone.

Miss Streisand never ceases to amaze her fans with song, but the tunes from the sequel don't have the overall impact of the delightful and memorable Funny Girl score.

James Caan, cast as Billy Rose, goes downhill on his portrayal after his opening appearance. It is a shame to waste this talented and relative newcomer on such a shallow characterization. There is no punch to the role.

There are laughs in the film, with a catastrophic opening night for one of Rose's show winning top comedic honors.

Ben Vereen does a showstopping dance, but using this magnificent talent in only one sequence is a disastrous mistake. Anyone who saw Vereen as the star of Broadway's Pippin will know why I consider his tooshort appearance an error.

Streisand could sing and act out the phone book and I probably would enjoy it, but Funny Lady is definitely not one of her best moments. It is somewhat amusing and entertaining, but slow. PG.

Jewison: Violence Can't Be Ignored

By Holly Spence

Los Angeles - Ironic that film director Norman Jewison should talk extensively and passionately about violence in the Victorian opulence of the Champagne Room of the Beverly Wilshire Hotel.

But he had special reason because his latest film, Rollerball, had just been screened and it centers around violence. (The film is scheduled to open Aug. 20 at the Douglas Theaters in Lin-

Rollerball is the game of the future when the world is controlled by major corporations and all problems, including hunger, war and crime, have been virtually eliminated. This sport, also controlled by the conglomerates, provides the masses with their principal outlet for violence and hostility.

Jewison, who said he abhors violence, noted that "violence in our society must be dealt with."

"You cannot make a love story without showing people in love and I cannot make a comment on violence in our society without dealing with violence."

He said "the game is not what the film is about."

"The real violence comes from the executives," interjected star James Caan.

Jewison first became interested in the idea when a short story by William Harrison titled, "Rollerball Murders," was brought to his attention.

Future Direction

"I thought there was something in it." he said "I was fascinated by the whole idea of a future society because I thought it gave some idea of what direction we are going.'

Jewison added that "I am more frightened of corporate entities than of political parties."

He liked the idea of an individual against the system (Caan plays Jonathan E. who is the top Houston Rollerball man). Jewison is disturbed by the "violence in our own society. increasing in most of the

"There is not one piece of gratuitous violence in this film." said Jewison.

"When you see the kind of violence being promoted in professional sports (he related a number of incidents from Philadelphia hockey games) in this country by the television networks and the people who control it, then I think maybe you'll have some idea of the direction in which we were motivated," he continued.

Jewison explained that a row of trees (burned for sport at a party) was "an attempt to indicate decadence within the society.'

"To destroy something that's living - something that is 200 vears old - is a sick and tragic thing," he said.

Jewison declined to attach too many other interpretations to the film.

"Films shouldn't be discussed as much by the director as they should be by the people who view them," he said.

But he avidly discussed the fact that the Motion Picture Association of America (MPAA) chose to give his picture an R rating — "they wanted to give it an X". He is convinced it is not as violent as the PG-rated Jaws.

"Form of Control"

"I think the rating system is a form of control and censorship which is applied to filmmakers; actually as a filmmaker, I am against all kinds of censorship," he said. "I really don't want people telling me what I can do or say. I don't think literature has any kind of censorship nor does the theater, but I also am a very practical person - I am not a spoon-fed idealist - and I know that some self-discipline is necessary."

Jewison feels Rollerball has something valid to say about the future and about our lives.

"I wanted people to be shocked by the behavior of the audience and the demands that were put upon people in this film," he commented.

He said the films like Death Wish "are ones that frighten

"I think violence in our society has to be dealt with and I think this picture does it," he said. "My greatest fear was that someone was going to be hurt."

Author Harrison was "happy with how the game was finally filmed ... I thought we were going to get a realistic game because film usually translates into realism, but I think we got an impressionistic game, too . . . you get the illusion of blows instead of directly seeing blows and you get the illusion of tremendous impact and speed and you don't see blood gushing."

John Houseman (who won an Oscar for The Paper Chase a couple of years ago) "represents the corporate society (in the film) and is responsible for the game," said Jewison.

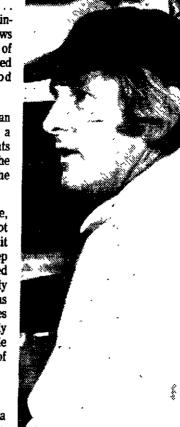

"As I state early in the picture, the game has social use . . . not just to amuse people ... it fulfills a function ... to keep people entertained interested and occupied ... historically this is not the first time that has happened, the Roman circuses were precisely that ... morally it's (the game is) reprehensible .." commented Houseman of Rollerball.

Deviation

Jewison said Rollerball is a deviation for him as a filmmaker because "most of my films have been about personal conflict between characters."

His credits include The Cincinnati Kid, In the Heat of the Night, Fiddler on the Roof ("it was banned in Chili as a Marxist statement," said Jewison) and Jesus Christ Superstar.

"I am not essentially known as an action director," he added. "But I find action is easier to direct than people."

On display at the Nebraska State Historical Society, 1500 R, are 20 oil paintings, the tools used and the papers of Thomas B. Johnson.

The articles were gifts of the late artist's wife, Mrs. Johnson of Seward.

Johnson was born May 19, 1890, in Omaha, where he lived until he was 10. After the death of his father, he lived with his mother's brother, Russell Aker, in Harvard until 1906. At that time, he moved to Stanton, Iowa, to live with his maternal grandmother.

From 1921 to 1923, Johnson studied under the Swedish artist, Dr. Biger Sandzen, at Bethany College in Lindsborg, Kan. He later attended the Broadmoor Art Academy in Colorado Springs and at the Minneapolis Institute of Art in Minnesota.

It was in the early 1930s when he had taken a special course in welding that he became associated with the Laboratory Division of the College of Agricultural Engineering at the University of Nebraska, a position be held until his retirement in 1955.

Lis Lewis Writes 'All's Well' Music

A Shakespearean comedy, All's Well That Ends Well, set in the time of France's Louis XVI, has music that is a "cross between Handel, Beethoven and popular music.

The play will be staged by the University of Nebraska Repertory Theatre July 18, 19, 22, 24, 28; Aug. 1, 5, 11, 14, 20, 25, 29, Sept. 3, 4, and 6 All performances will begin at 8 pm. in Howell Memorial Theater, 12th

According to director David Bell, All's Well is not so much a comedy as an adventure story or fairy tale.'

In the play the adults such as the king, countess and widow are surrounded by "impetuous kids who play games, the games are metaphors for life." An example of one of their games is the marriage game.

"The focus of the play is Helena, a woman who takes the male prerogative of pursuing her mate and wins him through her persistence," Bell said.

Bell described the play as "complex and not well known. It is sad, melancholy at times but also very intriguing. He said the style of his production is 'quite conventional" except for the music which composer Lis Lewis has written.

This is the third play Ms Lewis and Bell have worked on together. The other two were Shakespeare's The Comedy of Errors in December 1973 and Bell's own Cohan Is a Grand Old Name staged last summer. Alan Nielsen is music director.

Ms. Lewis said her inspiration came from listening to many Masses and music of the period and from "a Methodist hymnal."

Second Week Snapshot Winner

For amateur as well as professional photographers, capturing a mood can be one of the most important elements in a prize-winning photograph.

And winners in the second week of The Sunday Journal and Star/Kodak International Newspaper Snapshot Awards (KINSA) contest did just that.

Bill Latza of Lincoln won his second weekly black and white prize with a picture of a couple silhouetted at a fountain, an immediate moodsetter.

church with its steeple stretching high was another black and white photo winner.

Color winners were Ralf Holmes and Carl Wolfe, both of Lincoln.

Holmes' color winner captures faint sun rays lighting fog encrusted hills.

Wolfe's picture was a closeup of a cluste of flowers with water droplets on petals and stems.

Three deadlines remain, July 15, 22 and 29. So enter soon. Weekly winners receive $5 and a certificate and later may be in the running for international awards through KINSA.

Facelift Big Boon For Niagara Falls

New York - Niagara Falls, "the honeymoon capital of the world" when mother was a girl, has had her face lifted, and the treatment seems to have worked miracles: Last year the resort in western New York attracted a record 16 million tourists.

A $250 million urban renewal program has bulldozed away a vast section of the city's slums and replaced it with a $37 million International Convention Center. An $8 million Municipal Plaza and a $10 million covered mall extending from the plaza to the falls are nearing completion. A Hilton hotel opened recently and two other hotels are on the drawing boards.

In addition, environmental specialists have been studying the famous falls themsleves. which have "retreated" about seven miles in the past 12,000 years, with "retreats" during the last 700 years of 3,000 feet at the Canadian Horseshoe Falls.

Their findings: The world's best-known cataract, with some corrective measures, should continue as a spectacular attraction for ages to come.

To aid in their study, the environmentalists built a complete miniature model of the falls, cascading water and all, and spent a year and a half on the scene examining the rock formations and evaluating plans to improve visitor safety.

Top priority was given to relocating railings at visitor overlooks and constructing structurally supported viewing & platforms to avoid a recurrence of a 1967 incident when 100 tons of rock broke away from Prospect Point, a favorite spot for viewing the falls, and plunged into the gorge. No one was injured int eh slide, the fourth at the falls in 40 years, but the falling rocks damaged a sourvenir shop.

One method used in reducing the risk of injuries to visitors is the expansion of an electronic system that would detect even the most moderate rock movements at the falls and deliver an early-warning signal to park police headquarters.

Bicentennial Project

of Living Photo Documentary On State Started

They began working on the project July 1. They intend to spend at least a year, perhaps a year and a half, photographing a documentary on Nebraska - its people, places, skies, trees, happy and sad occasions.

Lincoln photographers Lynn Dance and Robert Starck - though both are employed otherwise as well - plan to take 100,000 photographs, give or take a few.

We will visit each of the 93 counties at least once and the majority more than once," Starck said. "The project is a part of the past, a great deal of the present and will be important for future citizens.

For instant, there are little towns in Nebraska which have nearly died. If they do die, it is important for our children and our grandchildren to know where they were and what they looked like in 1975-76.

'Nebraska is losing some of its old buildings — take the old style barn. They are becoming extinct — yet they are an interesting part of our environment today," he added.

Present History

"We feel an important part of the bicentennial is to record through honest photographs the present day history of the state. Once recorded it can be kept forever, but if it is not recorded it will be gone forever," Dance said

The two men believe they can photograph the eastern third of Nebraska based here in Lincoin "But we must photograph the western two-thirds from other areas. We would rather stay in persons' homes than at motels - though certainly the 1-80 culture of its motels must have some attention.'

Dance and Starck say that just as the wagon 'rain trails through the river valleys were part of history as the railroads came through Nebraska. so too are Highways 30 and 2, dying and becoming a part of history because of 1-80.

"We intend to record for posterity the changes. We certainly are not going to duplicate what the news media are doing; we intend to do a historical documentary.

"For instance when an athletic or other such event is taking place, the news media focus on participants. We use wide-angle lens and try to record the whole atmosphere including the crowds, as well as the participants," Starck said.

What is important in 1975-76°

"That's a difficult question. For some persons it may be putting plastic flowers on gravestones. We intend to ask persons, 'How would you like to be seen? How would you like to be recorded for posterity? For some it may be in the fields of their farms, for others it may be in the kitchens of their homes," Dance said.

The photographers plan pictures with strong aesthetic quality. They plan to use the best paper, fine negative fixes and good washes. They believe mounting board of 100% rag content is important.

Archival Standard

"We plan to do the whole thing up to government and archival standards — negatives and prints," Dance stressed.

The idea for the photo documentary is that of Starek and Dance with funds coming from the Nebraska American Revolution Bicentennial Commission (NARBC) and the Nebraska Arts Council (NAC). Since grants from the two agencies cannot be made to individuals, Sheldon Art Gallery at the University of Nebraska was named the sponsoring organization and will act as bookkeeper.

Dance and Starck are co-directors, photographers, printers and final editors. "Norman Geske (Sheldon director) has been very helpful," they agreed. "We plan the first official exhibition of the project at Sheldon in early 1978. There may be other small exhibitions of parts of the project in various towns in the state, prior to the official opening.

"We also hope to have some small portfolios of certain sections which will be archivally printed," Starck said. "Libraries throughout Nebraska may want to display them. We hope to produce a hard bound catalog of the project. In the end - after we have finished with the negatives, they will be given to the Nebraska State Historical Society.

So far, NARBC has approved a $5,483 grant and NAC, $5,000. This total doesn't quite cover the cost of materials and travel, the photographers say.

"For instance, I've spent money for a 4x5 camera and to beef up my darkroom equipment," Dance said. "But that's okay. We both wanted to do the project. Even if we can't find money for any full-time salary compensation, we'll try to do it during our free time.'

Enthusiasm

If enthusiasm and know-how can make a documentary successful, this particular one should be a whiz For the young men are willing to give up time with their families and time for recreation in order to do serious work on a history of the state in 1975-76.

They would like to find some compensation for their time, so they could give up their present work - or at least take leaves-of-absence. But if it is not to be, it is not to be, they say. And the show will go on regardless.

Guidebook To Alaska

By Wade Franklin (c) Chicago Sun-Times

The traffic up the Alaska Highway must be growing year by year At least, we have to assume that is the case when looking over this year's edition of Milepost, a guidebook now in its 27th year.

Much bigger than before, Milepost now contains 498 pages crammed with the information anyone would need on a motor trip up the Alaska Highway through British Columbia, the Yukon and Alaska itself.

The Alaska Highway is only one of many highways mapped and described, but the mile-bymile log is helpful for many reasons.

It tells you such things as where the accommodations are (there are 58 parking spaces at Charlie Lake's campground, for instance), what to see along the way (the old Klondike Sternwheeler is now a museum on the Yukon River at Whitehorse), and the actual mileage to everywhere (the business exit to downtown Fairbanks, for instance.) is 1511.1.

Milepost is published by Alaska Northwest Publishing

Towboat Sgt. Floyd in Bellevue, Omaha

Floating Museum Docks in Nebraska

As part of its bicentennial commemoration, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers will dock its floating museum, the towboat St. Floyd, in Bellevue, Omaha and Sioux City this week and next week.

The corps has renovated the upper deck of the vessel which contains a variety of exhibits and displays depicting the corps' contribution to the nation from 1775-1975.

Col. Russell A. Glenn, Omaha district engineer, says each tour is climaxed by a 15-minute multi-screen show in a mini-theater at the rear of the exhibit area.

The Sgt. Floyd pushes the 100-foot Huck Finn barge which has been outfitted with rails, a red-white-and-blue canopy and artificial turf. Omaha and Bellevue's bicentennial committees and Sioux City's River-Cade Committee are planning to use the barge for local displays and band concerts.

The Sgt. Floyd began its 18-month journey on the country's inland waterways June 17 in St. Louis.

Stops in the Omaha district and the times are:

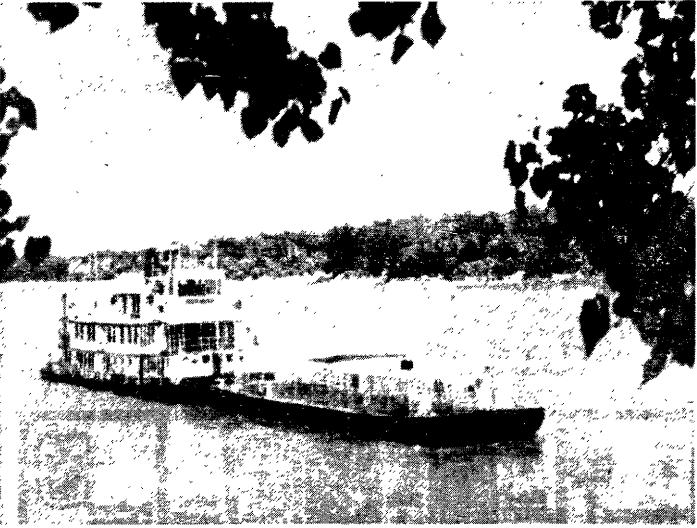

Bellevue's Haworth Purk: Tuesday from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Omaha's Dodge Park: July 17 from 2 to 10 p.m. and July 18-21 from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Sioux City's Marina Inn: July 23 from 2 to 10 p.m., July 24-26 from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. and July 27 from 10 a.m. to noon.

Tours are about one hour long and the last tour will start one hour before the above listed closing times.

PBS Develops Decoding Device

By Lee Margulies

Los Angeles (AP) - Imagine watching your favorite television show. Suddenly there is an interruption and the words "news bulletin" or "emergency weather advisory" appear on the

And then the sound goes out.

You run to the radio. No sound there either. You pick up the phone but can't reach anyone who can tell you what is happening.

Time to panic?

It's always like that for Nancy Lipschultz and untold numbers of other television viewers who are deaf.

frightening. "It's Frightening," says Mrs. Lipschultz, who lives in Chicago. "I'm ready to tear the hair out of my head. Sometimes, I'm actually in tears. I do not know where to run or hide.'

The problem is that most TV stations do not cater to the needs of the deaf and hard of hearing. A few run printed captions to accompany the voices of news announcers, but they are a minori-

Most either aren't equipped to make the captions or think the delay too costly in competitive terms - considerations which obviously are given precedence over the Federal Communications Commission's (FCC) 1970 recommendation that captions be used for urgent news announcements.

News bulletins are only an example. The same attitude extends to all areas of television programming. Carol McEvoy thinks she knows why.

"Deaf people don't show up in the ratings," she says. "... so commercially, deaf people are just not considered important.'

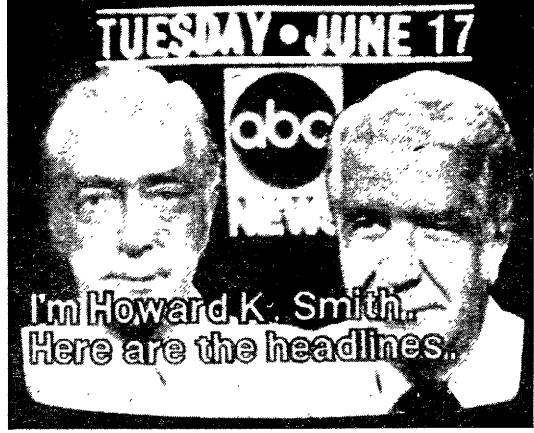

Mrs. McEvoy is one of a handful of interpreters given a few minutes on some local stations to summarize the news in sign language. The daughter of deaf parents, she was hired at local Channel KTTV in Los Angeles after the deaf community made known the panic its members felt in the wake of the earthquake of Feb. 9, 1971.

Ask her why deaf people watch television in the first place, and she stares in disbelief for several long moments. Then she says:

"When you're deaf, everything you learn - any input at all goes through your sense of touch, your smell, your eyes. You absorb everything you can through your eyes.

"But there are not a lot of avenues open. You have reading and you have pictures. Television is a combination of the printed word and pictures so you utilize what's in front of you."

Dr. Edgar L. Lowell, director of the John Tracy Clinic in Los Angeles and an internationally known authority on teaching the deaf, confirms that many deaf persons do watch television. It's part of the American culture even if they can't get much out Francisco radio. of it, he said.

opinion is that the deaf aren't missing much in most commercial television fare, he believes broadcasters should be doing more to let them experience TV.

The answer would seem to be subtitles — dialog written at the bottom of the screen, just as it is in foreign films.

The Public Broadcasting Service (PBS) has been experimenting with subtitles since 1972 and presently is offering its affiliates 13 episodes of Feeling Good in this form. Upcoming segments of the Nova series also will be subtitled.

PBS also offers a late night captioned version of the ABC news show that is shown over that network earlier in the evening. (It can be seen at 10:30 p.m. Monday through Friday on he Nebraska ETV Network).

These programs are being broadcast with what PBS calls "open captions," meaning everyone who watches sees the subtitles. To satisfy the non-deaf cost of about $250.

And though Lowell's personal who find the print distracting, each episode is being offered twice a week - once with captions and once without.

PBS already has tested successfully the technique of transmitting "closed captions," scrambling the subtitles into the electronic televising signal so that only viewers with special decoding devices hooked to their TV sets see the words. For everyone else, the picture is nor-

Doris C. Caldwell, coordinator of the PBS project, reports the network is now petitioning the FCC for permission to put the decoding device into mass production for the nation's 10 million or so deaf.

Ev Anderson, director of engineering at KCET, the PBS outlet in Los Angeles, viewed the system when it was being tested for several months last year and said he thinks the decoding devices will be available within a few years at a

TVFinally Comes to South Africa

By Erik Van Ees

Johannesburg (UPI) -"Please, people," the policeman in blue shorts said. "Please move along, you're blocking the sidewalk and I can arrest ..."

His voice trailed off and he, too, stood on tiptoe, craning his neck over the heads of the crowd to see how Jan Wilkens, South Africa's heavyweight wrestler, tangled with America's Don Leo Jonathan on a color television set in a downtown shop window.

The policeman, like thousands of other South Africans, was interested in watching television.

After lagging behind the rest of the world for more than a decade, the South African government decided to allow television into the country, sweeping aside objections that the flickering screens would break down the moral fiber of its citizens and drastically change their political thinking.

Test programs started May 5 and will continue two hours daily, except Sundays, until full service begins Jan. 1, 1976.

Officials of the South African Broadcasting Corp.'s television service say the broadcasts will educate, inform and entertain but will not be controversial or inflammatory. There will be about five hours of sports shown each week. Eventually about 50% of the productions will be filmed locally.

Technically, the service is one of the world's most advanced. Based in a $220 million complex in Johannesburg, it transmits in color and in both official languages, English and Afrikaans. A channel specifically for blacks in the Nguni and Sotho languages may come into operation by 1979.

At present the service receives a government subsidy but within two years will have to exist on the income from license fees only — $53 per set per year.

But advertisers and manufacturers said even if 600,000 TV number of licenses were sold by cost of the sets - $1,165 for a 20-1978, the income would only total $31.75 million a year, about half the service's running expenses at current costs.

Jan Swanepoel, the corporation's director general, is aware of the cost problem. "You can't operate this expensive situation without advertising. You can't live without it," he Commercial television may come by 1978 with advertisements limited to 5% of the daily five hours viewing time, or a total of 15 minutes.

The test programs are mainly screened for the benefit of studio staff and technicians to give them some experience before the real thing starts.

Reaction to the first programs varied. The living room viewers with brand new sets discovered they suddnely had more friends than ever before. Television dealers reported up to 30% insets and a corresponding creases in sales despite the high inch color set or $1,553 for a 26inch set.

> The public was almost uniformly delighted with the sports shows, in-depth reports on sportsmen, South African travelogues and newscasts.

Newspaper critics said the technical quality of the service was excellent but the productions lacked imagination, inspiration and the skills acquired with experience.

They also said Premier John Vorster, who gave his first local TV interview, "should learn to smile every now and then.'

Dr. Albert Hertzog, the former minister of posts and telegraphs largely responsible for keeping TV out of South Africa until he resigned in 1968, had not changed his mind.

"The children will grow up in the presence of degradation and evil within their homes."

Brian Keith, Barry Morse, John Mills (from left) and Lilli Palmer are the stars of The Zoo Gang, the six-hour mini-series based on Paul Gallico's novel to be seen in three two-hour segments Wednesdays on NBC (2) at 8 p.m.

by KLIN, a 1000-watt station in Lincoln which has the Nebraska Football Network that sends games to every hamlet and radio-equipped tractor in the state Additionally, KLIN's broadcasts are carried to Denver, Cheyenne, South Dakota and Kansas.

If KLIN should miss any listeners, three more Nebraska stations broadcast the games, including one with yet another network It's saturation broadcasting In this area getting one station to broadcast games is overkill.

Is there a salable market in the Bay Area for a football team that plays its games balf a continent away? As a swaggering. Nebraskan might answer: Does the Cornbusker football team win? Emphatically yes. Since 1970, for example, NU has won

Interest? It's there in a visible The games will be originated way, too. Each year there is a charter flight - costing as much as $5,000 -- to Lincoln for alumni from southern and northern California. The most frequent complaint is that the DC-8 stretch jet provided by the airlines won't accommodate all who want to go.

> The fund-raising for the KEST broadcasts has produced about one-quarter of what's needed from mail solicitation, although one official concedes, "many people don't ever see these mailings" The next phase says assistant football coach George Darlington, who recruits in northern California, is "to start telephoning the alums personally " Alumni-businessmen also will be sought to buy advertising on the broadcasts to reduce the dependence on donations.

"The biggest donation so far has come from the Los Angelesbased 'Californians for Nebraska', who have pledged $500," said Don Gill, KLIN's play-by-play announcer for the past three years. A 46-year-old who looks like Dodgers' announcer Vin Scully, Gill is a native of Long Beach and attended college in Kansas. Nebraskans don't hold that against him, however.

"Ironically," Gill added, "the southern California bunch has the money for their broadcasts this coming season, about $8,000 but now has no station."

KEST is only 1000-watts but has a broadcast radius of 60 miles which means Big Red football will reach into Santa Cruz, Napa, Pittsburg and Fairfield, according to station manager Al Schultz He said KEST prefers to carry Nebraska's entire 11-game schedule because "if we contract for only 6 or 8 games and the team is going great.... Schultz' voice trailed off, his mind obviously full of visions of rabid Big Red fans besieging the station.

If the games are broadcast, the second one against Indiana on Sept. 20 will be delayed about three hours because of KEST's commitment to carry the Monterey Jazz Festival. Unfortunately, Nebraskans' musical tastes run to the school's fight song after each Husker touchdown.

The enthusiasm generated for Nebraska football far transcends mere numbers Being in Lincoln on a brisk autumn Saturday is like being in another world with the team the cynosure.

Balloon Contest In Iowa

Indianola, Iowa — Up, up and away. It's the 1975 National Hot Air Balloon Championship.

On Aug. 2, some 150 balloonists will gather on the campus of Simpson College in Indianola for pleasure and competition. On Aug. 8, a national champion will be named from a field of 100 competing aeronauts.

Various contests are scheduled for those competing for the national title. Others come just to join in the fun.

Most hot air balloons stand about 70 feet high and carry two or three people. Since these non-directional aerostats depend on wind and thermal conditions, most of the flying will take place between 6 and 9 a.m. and 6 and 9 p.m.

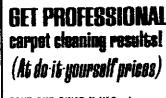

As recently as 1962, fewer than seven hot air balloons existed worldwide. In 1974 the balloon population rose to over 250. The airborne heater system, developed by the U.S. Navy has helped ballooning become a popular sport, rather than the hobby of a few. The aerostats now have modern propane burners and flameproof nylon and polyester envelopes.

Only two aeronauts from Nebraska, both Omahans, are registered to participate in the week-long event.

The Balloon Federation of America first chose Indianola for the site of its national competition in 1971. This Iowa town has been the host each year since. Some 40,000 spectators were on hand for the Sunday flights last year.

In 1973, Indianola, under the direction of their Chamber of Commerce, formed a non-profit organization, Indianola Balloons Inc., to boost community participation in the national event. All the work done for the championship is volunteer.

Indianola is 17 miles south of Des Moines.

Our Little Town Young Skinners Always on 'Go'

By Gertrude Skinner

Superior

Young parents deserve hazardous duty pay these days.

Take my son Jack and his wife Sandra — their hectic, childoriented schedules make à tornado look like a study in slow motion.

Go-go parents, that's what they are. Go for the children and related interests, constantly and perpetually. Go! Makes me glad that I have graduated to Grandma and spectator sports. To watch my young family do all they need to do is about as close as I care to come to involvement.

July is birthday month in the young Skinner household in Yankton, S.D. When the children were small Eli and I used to keep U.S. 81 hot with birthday cake deliveries. Now I just keep Highway 81 hot — sans cakes. It took me years to realize that cakes hauled 250 miles over detours in the heat are just not that great.

Brad, the little firecracker I used to tell you about, was 17 on July 2. Doesn't seem possible, does it? From the freckle-faced, adorable little boy has emerged an unblemished, 6-foot sophisticated student, athlete, musician. A National Honor Society member he has just returned from representing Yankton High School at Boys State in Aberdeen, S.D. Now baseball and summer theater and work.

Pam, the fragile little angel who arrived on Grandpa Eli's birthday — July 14 — will be 19 on that day of this year. When Pam, our first grandchild, was a toddler she was my shadow and now the positions are reversed and I am hers. She is like an Easter morning — quiet, beautiful and inspiring. It is only when she places her loving hand in mine that I know peace. Shy, and blonde, she is so petite (size 5) that the hospital where she does volunteer work was unable to furnish her with a uniform. Now summer study, reading, sewing, senior Girl Scouts and Senior Choir.

Andrea, the youngest, will be 8 on July 25. An angelic baby, a cherubic little one, Andy is now at war with life trying to decide whether she is going for the Bible, baseball or ballet. She is proficient in all three. She can quote the Bible with all of the finesse of a seminary graduate, field a foul ball like a professional and do Swan Lake as Nureyer might approve. Now swimming, Brownies, library and Junior Choir.

Jack and Sandra? Why "go" of course.

Traveling by Car in Southern Europe Fast Trip

By Nick Gregory, UPI

Want to drive 70, 80, 100 miles per hour again without keeping an eye glued to your rear view mirror? Try southern Europe.

France.

Touris for a merchange.

On a round-trip drive from Paris, France, to Brindisi, Italy, covering just under 3,000 miles, I never saw a highway cop. The only speed limit signs were posted on hazardous curves in the Alps and where repair work was in progress.

There are some shortcomings. Gasoline in Italy runs about $2.20 per gallon and $1.95 in France.

Tourists entering Italy by car for a month can buy coupons exchangeable for 400 liters of gas at about $1.35 per gallon. The shorter the visit, the fewer the number of coupons offered to a minimum of 100 liters for up to one week.

In other countries the price is set by the government, so bargain hunting is out. The prices make it clear why Europe's roads are overrun by economy model cars, nearly all of which get at least 25 miles per gallon

All an American tourist needs is an American driver's license in Italy and France. The driving is on the right side of the road, just like in the United States.

Toll-road surfaces were superb and highway markings were good. A review of international traffic signals is in order for drivers not familiar with route were ample. We never drove more than 30 minutes without seeing hotels, restaurants or gas stations, and washrooms along the way were clean and modern.

Accommodations along the

Most of our trip was on toll roads which were at least as good as any I've seen in the U.S. Most beautiful stretch was on a highway through the Rivieras between Cannes, France, and Rapallo, Italy. The road was excellent and the trip was full of fantastically beautiful pan-

We discovered early there is no speed limit. We were passed many times by cars going well over 100 m.p.h., but we didn't see one accident.

Car rentals average about $150 per week in season. The figure covers rental, taxes and insurance. You can improve on the price with a smaller car, but for a party of three or four the few extra dollars for a slightly larger car are a genuine bargain.

Erica Jong, Poet

Jong; Holt, Rinehart & Winston.

Mere mortals should never review books of poetry. It's too hard on the mortal and even harder on the poet.

Suffice it to say that Erica Jong's third book of poetry, Loveroot, is awfully good.

Her first volume, Vegetables, was good. Her second, Half-Lives, was good enough to check out of the library several times. Loveroot is good enough to buy, read and then lend to a friend, provided it's returned — soon.

In Loveroot, Jong continues some of the themes found in earlier poems and in her novel, Fear of Flying, themes that have made the epitnet "feminist poet" fit

But those themes - what it means to be a woman and a poet, for example - are not all there is to Erica Jong. It is wrong to package and thus limit her to the realm of feminist poetry.

Her feminism is still evident in but there is Loveroot, less bitterness, less anger than in her first two books And I think that means she is maturing, both as a poet and as a feminist. Feminists, who have had legitimate reaons for anger, also must grow beyond that anger if the real changes they want are to take place.

Jong seems to endorse that in Testament (Or, Homage to Walt Whitman)" when she says: "Rage is a common weed/Anger is cheap ... I resolve now for

But her strongest poems, or it would seem so to me, are those in which she does not wear her politics (in this case, her feminism) on her sleeve. "Letter to Myselves," "Tapestry, with Unicorn," and "You Whom I Hope to Reach by Writing" are among the best of these.

Some iolks call her poetry earthy. That is just a word-game way of saying she doesn't play that game in talking about birth, death, love, lovers, marriage and, oh, gosh, sex. Her poetry is sometimes humorous and almost always intense and intensely personal.

Bonuses in all her volumes are the fine quotes from other authors that she uses to begin sections of poetry.

Among the best from her new volume is this one: Run mad as often as you choose but do not faint. —Jane Austen.

Better still: I trust all joy. -Theodore Roethke.

Warm Tennessee Tale

In a Bluebird's Eye. By Anita Clay Kornfeld; Holf, Rinehart & Winston

Children, especially between the ages of nine and the early teens, seem to live in such a world of fantasy that they make delightful subjects for stories.

Would the books Huckleberry Finn or Tom Sawyer have been as great if those two characters had been younger or older?

Suppose Jim in Treasure Island had been older. It might have read like another Three Years Before the Mast.

This novel asks: "Can 11-yearold Honor Jane Whitfield find happiness in a small coal-mining town in the mountains of Tennessee in the 1930s?"

Margate is provincial, segregated and poor. Honor Jane is sassy, snoopy, proud and brassy bold.

The answer to the question, then: "Not likely."

Lonely and frustrated by her mother's narrow-minded snobbishness and her father's growing reputation as the town drunk, Honor Jane finds solace in secretly befriending Lola, Margate's lowest citizen.

Lola, a black woman, served time in the state penitentiary for killing a white man. She is "on loan" to Dr. Clark and his miserly old wife, Mamie

Honor Jane reasons that Lola has paid her debt and that being on loan and shut up in a little shed-type house behind Dr Clark's is just the same as being in prison, even though there isn't a lock on the door. She resolves to set Lola free.

To send her hitchhiking down the county road is out. Maybe the railroad tracks would be best. When Honor Jane visualizes Lola trying to swing up onto even a slow-moving freight train, she abandons that scheme. Anyway, Lola says that would really be railroading her back to the pen if she bappens to get caught.

With the closing of the Black Diamond Coal Co., the townspeople begin to leave Margate. For Lola, it's escape or back to prison.

The day before Christmas, Lola and Honor Jane put their risky plan into action. In the disastrous hours that follow, Honor Jane grows up. Her love and understanding for her father is strengthened, and Dr. Clark becomes her only confidante.

Honor Jane even finds the courage to leave Lola a bluebird, a broken ornament from the dismantled Christmas tree, and hold back the tears.

Anita Clay Kornfeld has written a very good first book.

Stories by Nabokov

Vladimir Nabokov

Tyrants Destroyed and Other Stories. By Vladimir Nabokov; McGraw-Hill.

My introduction to Russian authors was the classic Crime and Punishment by Dostoevski. It left me with the impression that they were abstruse, morbid and slightly insane.

Dr. Zhivago didn't come to life for me until I saw it in glorious color on a wide screen. Omar Shariff helped.

My reasons for selecting Vladimir Nabokov's Tyrants Destroyed escapes me at the moment, but it certainly was one of my wiser judgments.

Nabokov is a prolific writer. Novels, screenplays, short stories and poetry have flowed from his pen. However, Lolita probably is the most familiar to the average reader.

This book is a collection of 13 1929 and 1939. Originally in Russian, they lose nothing in their translation by Dimitri Nabokov and the author. The poverty, pathos and humor of the Russian emigre world of that period are described with imposing style.

The title story is one of the collection's most intriguing. It is a tale of a hatred that grows day by day, year after year, like a cancer. The deadly tentacles of destruction inexorably reach out, contaminating, weakening, consuming. Is the object of the hatred a

Stalin, Hitler, someone later perhaps?

The antidote is so simple! Imagine being saved by laughter that comes bubbling from a spring deep in the soul, cleansing the festering sore, laughter caused by the realization that in making the object of hatred omnipotent and terrifying, the hater has instead made him ridiculous, thereby rendering HIS destruction, not yours.

"Music" is a captivating vignette of a man observing his former wife from across the room during a piano recital. The reader has the sensation of watching a pantomine or ballet, with the musical background providing the tempo for the actors' emotions.

"A Matter of Chance," the story of a drug addict in his final hours of life before he commits suicide, has an Alfred Hitchcock

"Perfection" is the tale of gentle, pathetically poor Ivanov the tutor. Many of Nabokov's stories deal with death and/or fantasy, and this one has an almost ethereal quality about it. The sparseness of Ivanov's life, including his threadbare wardrobe "socks so full of holes they resembled lace mittens" - has the transparent quality of a Wyeth painting.

Reading this book is a unique experience. It is like studying a Picasso after a diet of Grandma available with production notes. Instructions on scenery, props and music are especially helpful.

Our scenery consists of original drawings, but ideas were gathered from books by Tomi Ungerer.

This sardonic artist's latest work embellishes a collection of folk tales: A Storybook (Franklin Watts). Ungerer's eye for detail and his wry sense of humor help him bring to life such old stories as the Grimm brothers' "Wishing Table." Most of the stories here included would make fine source material for puppet plays

Music, maestro, adds an extra note of drama to any puppet show. Our program will boast original music and lyrics, though we might have considered using extant material like that in The Moon on One Hand (Atheneum).

Author William Crofut has set to music simple poetry by Randall Jarrell, Robert Louis Stevenson, James Stephens, e e cummings and others. The resulting songs are enchanting, especially The Wind by Stevenson and The Garden by Thomas Moore. Easy piano and guitar accompaniments are provided.

Between our puppet plays, Alfred Hitchcock's voice will read funny jokes and poems.

We might have been inspired by Bernice Carlson's Funnybone Dramatics (Abingdon), which introduces kids to the art of acting with riddles and puppet jokes. ## The Buddha's Family

Lady of the Lotus. By William E. Barrett; Doubleday

In the foreword of this book William E. Barrett writes: "There have been at least one thousand books written about Diddharta Gautama, who became the Buddha, and not a single book on the life of Yasodhara, who married him, or of Rahula, his son . . .

"I have had to build many intuitive bridges but I believe the bridges are sound, that this is the story as it was."

Barrett has been interested in Buddhism since he was in his 20s, when he knew a "holy and dedicated Buddhist priest named T. Ono." And since that time he has researched the story he has put into a 375-page volume chronicling the life of Yasodhara. The result is one of the world's truly great love

It all begins when the Rajas of Koli and Kapila believe their children to be born in April 563 B.C. will be sons. All omens, which have been read by the Brahmin priests, have pointed to the births of sons.

But it was not to be.

The Raja of Koli became the father of a daughter, Yasodhara; the Raja of Kapila the father of a son, Siddharta Gautama, who was to become the Buddha.

Although their fathers are rivals, the two 18-year-olds fall in love. The rivalry is put aside for the 9-day wedding.

The second part of Barrett's five-party story tells of the maturing of the young couple -both in their religious beliefs and their love. Yet during this time Siddharta feels he must find the road to holiness - alone.

"There is another road, another choice. My birth reading said so and I believe it. It is a spiritual choice. I have walked the one road. Now I must walk the other. How else can I choose?" he asks his beloved wife after the birth of their son, Rabula.

He sees his wife only once again before he leaves to seek the truth by walking alone. He finds it a long road.

For the first five years of his life, Rahula is under the care of his mother. It is then that his grandfather takes matters into his own hands: the child must go to school, learn to play with other boys, learn the training of men. It is a sorrowful time for Yasodhara.

When Yasodhara knows the Buddha is returning to his home, she knows that he will show great changes. She also is concerned about their meeting. Its consequences and the death of Siddharta's father bring about great changes in the lives of Yasodhara and Rahula.

This is truly a fine book, and I could not put it down after I began reading it.

Q. Is it true that President Ford's press secretary, Ron Nessen, will soon resign because a newsman called him a liar, and Nessen feels he has lost his credibility with the White House press corps?—L.T., Washing-

A. It is true that at a June 6th, 1975, press briefing in the White House, a newsman called Nessen a liar. But Nessen is not resigning; neither has he lost his credibility with the White House press corps. Nessen will probably stay on through 1976. He realizes that he has become the so-called "fall guy" for a so-called "open administration," but he is also an admirer of Gerald Ford and knows it would do the President little good to have had two press secretaries resign from office. The first, of course, was Jerald terHorst who resigned after Gerald Ford pardoned Richard Nixon

Q. Who is Simone Veil? Is she really the most popular woman in France?-Charlotte Fuller, Seattle, Wash.

A. Simone Veil, 47, is the French Minister of Health. Under her guidance, France became the first major Catholic country in Europe to legalize abortion. Madame Veil, deported to the Auschwitz concentration camp by the Nazis in World War II, is considered a possibility for a future nomination as Premier. She is an outstanding lawyer and in 1970 became the first woman secretary-general of the Higher Court of Judges. She is married, has three children.

Q. Before he resigned his office last August, President Nixon said he would pay his 1969 taxes of $148,000. Has he done so?—D.L., San Clemente, Cal. A. As of this writing former President Richard Nixon has not paid his 1969 federal income tax bill of $148,000. The statute of limitations has expired on that bill, and even though he said he would pay it, he may very well not. Nixon owed $432,787 in back taxes as of May, 1975.

LANGLEY, VA

ost people think of espionage as a man's world. But just as history has its Mata Hari and fiction its Modesty. Blaise, so the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency has a handful of high-ranking women professionals.

Take Jenonne Walker, a veteran intelligence analyst and executive assistant to Director William, E. Colby. Or take Pat Taylor, a member of the agency's Office of Current Intelligence. Or Helene Boatner, a top economist who helps supervise the CIA's secret budget. Or the chief of the Soviet Internal Affairs branch one of Washington's most respected Kremlinologists—a woman who has come up through the ranks of the CIA

For the first time, the CIA has permitted all these women to be interviewed. Some, like the Kremlinologist and a number of clandestine operators, asked that their names not be used in print because of the political sensitivity of their jobs.

Others, however, are not worried about PARADE blowing their "cover." They work in the open—gathering, evaluating, and analyzing information, or administering the CIA's global operations from the agency's sprawling head-quarters in Langley, Va.

A spokeswoman's voice

As Helene Boatner puts it, "There are a lot of people in the CIA who cannot speak up, so it behooves those of us who can to inform and educate the American people about what we do."

Not that the agency was at first eager to open its door even a crack to PARADE In keeping with the time-honored tradition of maintaining low and often invisible profiles, agency officials turned down an initial request for interviews with women. But then Director Colby intervened. He suggested to his colleagues that the agency, with all its mounting controversial publicity, needed to increase its press accessibility and public accountability

While waiting to interview women at the CIA, PARADE asked two former high-ranking male agency officials what it took for a woman to break into intelligence work—and to get ahead.

To James Angleton, recently retired after 21 years as chief of counterintelligence, the ideal female candidate is one who "has lived abroad, possesses special attributes, especially political awareness, an area of expertise, and a fluency with foreign languages. A serious, ambitious and competitive woman who wishes to reach the top," Angleton avers, "can find fulfillment in a CIA career"

Says Ray Cline, former deputy director of the CIA: "If you look at women in responsible positions at the agency, you notice that they achieved their jobs through ability, of course, but also through flexibility in accepting challenging assignments. Most of them are single."

No wonder. The agency has not made it easy for married women to join its ranks. Spouses are not allowed to work in the same offices. A wife may not take her husband abroad as a dependent. She must take periodic lie-detector tests to make sure she has not disclosed classified information to friends or relatives—or to her husband if he does not work for the agency. Until this year, the CIA's Career Trainee Program, which is geared toward turning out clandestine operators, admitted no married women at all.

Fits to a T

Angleton's and Cline's descriptions of the ideal woman for the ClA fits Jenonne Walker. After 12 years at a variety of posts in the intelligence division, this 40-year-old native of Oklahoma is now Colby's No. 1 aide. To reach her office a PARADE reporter, tagged with a badge marked "visitor," was ushered up to the seventh floor of CIA headquarters in a private, locked elevator. Miss Walker's office is next door to Colby's and offers a commanding view of the lush green Virginia countryside.

She is an attractive woman with a frank but friendly manner.

"The director has a group of special assistants — 11 National Intelligence Officers who know what's going on in different areas of the world," she explains. "I act as a clearing house for other agency staff and as an information funnel for Colby. I took this job about two years ago when he became director. He told me I was to 'educate him on the substance.' By that he meant I had the responsibility of introducing him to the intelligence side of the agency." (Before becoming head of CIA, Colby spent most of his career in the "black," or covert, side of the business)

The Colby administration

"It's my job to know the major foreign intelligence questions that analysts around town are disagreeing about," continues Miss Walker. "I sometimes get the analysts together so Colby can hear all sides of an issue. I also staff-out orders for him I also check on the progress of things he wants done and I suggest other projects he might begin.

"This is not an organization where orders are really necessary. It's more a matter of monitoring and suggesting activities. It's a very personal operation Colby's is a small, personal office "

The job of special assistant to the director is a rotating assignment. Miss Walker will be transferred later this summer. "I hanker after my own cabbage patch," she says. "I'll miss the constant access to the director, but I look forward to getting back to writing my own reports."

When Jenonne Walker rejoins the ranks of the analysts, one of her most distinguished colleagues will be the woman who serves as branch chief for Soviet Internal Affairs. She is constantly asked by policymakers to assess the political and physical health of Soviet Communist Party boss Leonid Brezhnev and to guide speculation about who his successor might be. She consented to talk to PARADE on condition that her name not be printed.

Feminine gumshoe

"In the Soviet field, length of experience counts," she says. "There are not many people in this town who have outlasted me. I've focused on the USSR since 1958. My work involves compiling all available information, regardless of its source, then examining the gaps and trying to guess what's in them. It's something like reading a mystery novel: as you turn each page you discover another piece of information, but you never get the whole story."

At 54, this capable knowledgeable lady earns $32,800 a year-near the top of the civil service scale. But she admits, "There were long dry periods when I thought I wasn't going anywhere. Looking back, however, I would take a job here again without question "

Another CIA professional who says she has no regrets is Helene Boatner, the first woman economist in the agency's budget office. She helps prepare the agency's requests for money from Congress and monitors the CIA's immense expenditures. A math major from the University of Texas, she was hired in 1963, then got a master's degree in economics. She has worked in the agency's Office of Economic Research, the now-defunct Office of National Estimates and attended the National War College. Her present job pays close to $35,000 a year.

Good place to work

"If you're interested in intelligence analysis or foreign affairs," says Miss Boatner, "I fee! the agency is a better place to work than the State Depart-

"Because the agency has no policy ax to grind. It's independent of bureaucratic interests. While it's not easy even here to suggest that American policy in any given area is wrong or misguided, it's more possible here than in any other place in the government."

Blonde, 39-year-old Pat Taylor, an analyst for the Office of Current Intelligence, was asked when she meets people away from her job if she is reluctant to admit she works for the CIA.

"No," she responds. "When friends learn I work here, I sometimes encounter curiosity but not hostility. The agency encourages its analysts to publish their writings outside, to attend meetings, and to take graduate courses. Sometimes I'll enter a conference wearing my name tag which clearly identifies me as a CIA employee, and I'll get a couple of blinks-but nothing else."

There is one group of CIA women who never wear name tags. These are the spies and counterspies—the women in the clandestine services.

Traditionally women have been relegated to a minor role on the fringes of spy activity. A woman attached to a foreign "station," or outpost, might have accompanied a male colleague to a restaurant, making it appear as if a husband and wife were dining out. Then she might be left at the table alone while her companion, "a case officer" in charge of "running" an agent, slipped into the men's room to pick up a message left in a "dead drop" by one of his local contacts.

However, a few women have themselves worked as "case officers" abroad One, with seven years' experience in the field, said, "Year by year there are more women case officers in the business, but they're still outnumbered by men. Covert operators must be inconspicuous. In such areas as the Moslem world, cultural mores prevent women from mingling freely and unobtrusively in public. In Western Europe, however, women now supervise agents and sometimes recruit them. They also provide operational support — countersurveillance, keeping a lookout during a meeting between a case officer and an agent, renting safe houses (where a rendezvous can take place) and acting as couriers. It's not glamorous work, but it's vitally important."

Clandestine interview

A retired female member of the counterintelligence staff, who agreed to be interviewed by telephone but would not be identified, concurs: "Without women, the counterintelligence office would be a lost branch. Women often served to supply all the digging—the leads, the targets"

But not, the agency insists, their bodies. The CIA claims to be above using its women to seduce or entrap potential foreign agents. A former London station chief once explained to his deputy, "Why, we couldn't ask American women to do things which would involve exploiting their sex!" Instead, say the old pros, if a clandestine operator wants to ensnare a foreign intelligence officer through the use of female charms, he hires prostitutes or relies on willing local agents. According to one former top-level agency official, foreign women have seduced "an astonishing number" of Russian spies on behalf of the CIA.

Help from drug agents

The CIA has also used U.S. narcotics men from time to time to maintain "love dens" in New York City and San Francisco, where prostitutes in the pay of the agency have lured foreign intelligence officers and then later tried to blackmail them into divulging secret information.

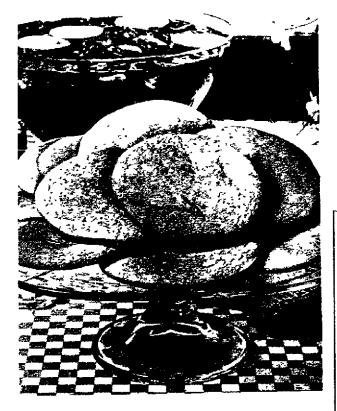

Despite the successful careers of some, the women of the CIA still have a long way to go. Four times as many men as women apply to the agency for jobs, and only 5 per cent of the agency's female staff earn $22,000 or above as compared to 49 per cent of the men.

But high-ranking women are not the rarity they were 10 years ago. The agency has generated a campaign to recruit more women as well as more blacks and members of other minorities.

"I think my being a woman was a factor in my being selected for this job," says Director Colby's executive assistant Jenonne Walker-adding with a smile, "but Colby isn't likely to admit it."

PAUL REVERE rode in 1775 to foil British plans for a surprise attack at Lexington and Concord. Since then, the clatter of his horse's hoofbeats has echoed through the centuries. His ride remains a stirring and fateful moment in the history of America—a reminder of the brave men who risked their lives and fortunes so that we might be free today.

Now, as the world celebrates 200 years of American freedom, we re-dedicate ourselves to the American ideal by recalling the proud deeds of patriots such as Paul Revere. To commemorate the 200th anniversary of his ride, The Danbury Mint will issue its first Bicentennial Bell.

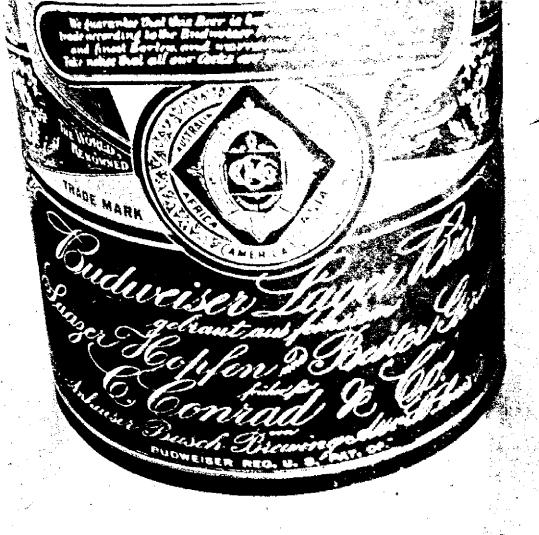

This beautiful porcelain heirloom will be available only briefly in a limited edition which closes forever on July 31, 1975. After that date, this first Bicentennial Bell will be available only from original owners willing to part with it, and only at their asking price, whatever that might be.

A few weeks ago insurance officials. revealed that damage awards totaling $35 million had been made in the world's first jumbo jet disaster--the crash of an Eastern Airlines L-1011 in Florida on Dec. 29, 1972, which killed 101 of the 176 passengers and crew members aboard.

Now comes word that a deal may be worked out between the insurance companies and the damage claims by relatives of the 346 people killed in the Turkish Airline DC-10 air crash near Paris 16 months

James FitzSimons, speaking for the four defendants in the case--McDonnell Douglas, makers of the plane; General Dynamics, a major subcontractor; Turkish Airlines, and the U.S. government, one of whose agencies approved the plane's airworthiness--is willing to make a deal providing there is no detailed, drawn-out court investigation as to which defendants were responsible for the crash.

FitzSimons told Judge Pierson Hall in Los Angeles that the offer for quick settlement was made on two conditions: (1) The plaintiffs must forgo punitive damages, and (2) they must cease attempts to hold the four defendants legally liable for the accident.

Punitive damages are damages awarded to punish the defendant, especially where willful and gross negligence can be proved. They can increase considerably the size of damages awarded.

What McDonnell Douglas and the other defendants are trying to prevent is a lengthy trial in which the public learns how the DC-10 was planned, constructed, tested, certified, and then crashed, killing all 346 aboard. It is one of the saddest, most shocking stories in the history of modern. aviation.

Lloyds of London, the insurers for three of the defendants, is rumored to be willing to settle an estimated $100 million in damage claims. Whether many of the lawyers representing the plaintiffs are willing to settle without punitive damages remains to be seen.

Train's rationale for requesting a delay in auto emission standards was based on the possibility that sulfuric acid emissions (sulfates) resulting from catalytic converters might be as dangerous as those hydrocarbon and carbon-monoxide pollutants which are effectively handled by the catalytic converter. In short, Train felt EPA might be trading off one pollution problem for a potentially far worse one.

Clarence Ditlow of the Public Interest Research Group, in testimony before the Senate Public Works Committee, explained that "... delaying the standards for five more years will mean that a total of seven model years of cars will be emitting three to four times the level of pollution called for in the 1970 Clean Air Act...this enormous increase in emissions will affect the total auto pollution burden on the public for years into the future ... "

Is Russell Train right? Are sulfuric acid emissions as hazardous to one's health as hydrocarbons and carbonmonoxide pollutants?

No one knows for sure. Sulfuric-acid pollutants might be as harmful as other pollutants but to date there have been only conflicting studies within EPA on the subject. Thus the reason Train has opted for a go-slow approach.

Environmentalists contend that desulfurization of leaded gasoline, that type of gasoline used by catalytic converters, would solve the sulfate emission problem. EPA is not sure of that but estimates that such an effort at Knowledgeable sources in Washington. D.C.. say that economic pressures played a role in Train's request, which he has also acknowledged in Senate testimony. But Train claims he hasn't caved in to auto interests, pointing to his recent requests that Congress adopt stricter auto emission standards for buses, trucks and motorcycles.

Lee Iacocca, president of Ford Motor Company, recently listed for the Senate Public Works Committee the following economic reasons why the automobile industry needs more time to meet the clean-air standards assigned to automobiles under the 1970 Clean Air Act.

1) Ford earned profits of over $1 billion a year before taxes in 1968, 1969 and 1970. In the six months ending March 31, 1975, Ford lost $205 million before

2) Foreign cars got 12 per cent of the U.S. market in 1969. In the first four months of this year, they got 21 per cent.

3) In 1969, the unemployment rate was 3.5 per cent overall and 3 per cent in the auto industry. Today it's about 9 per cent overall, and close to 20 per cent in the auto industry. Automotive unemployment has been over 200,000 in each of the past four months, though the industry remains the nation's largest private employer.

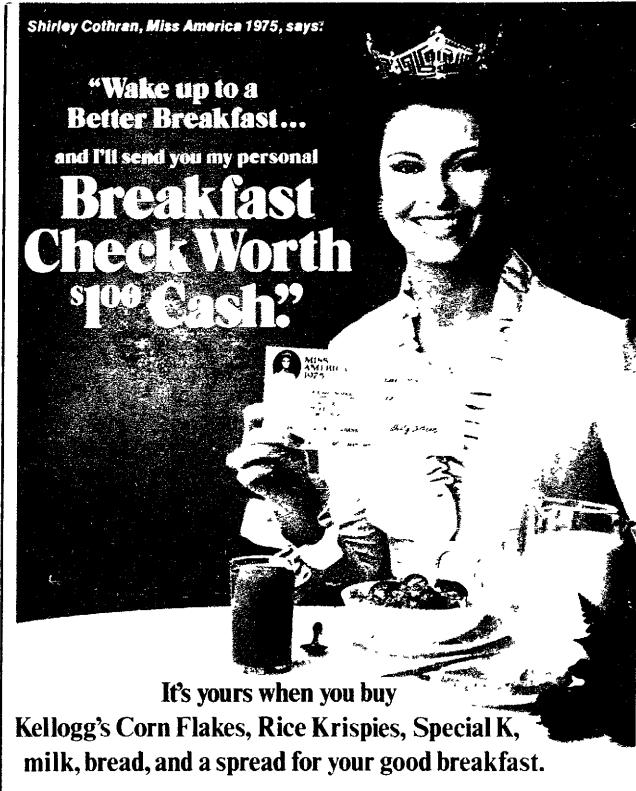

4) Industry new-car sales in the U.S. were about 9.6 million in 1968 and again in 1969. This year, we're forecasting 8.4 million, and we'll need considerable improvement to get there.

"Because of the long automotive depression, and because prices can't be raised enough to offset cost increases," explains Iacocca, "we just don't have the money it would take to get the fuel economy done, quickly and well, and at the same time to meet statutory emission standards...we believe that today's circumstances require a five-year moratorium on tighter emission standards."

Japanese-Americans Say

'We're Americans, Too'

by David Ushio

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.

have been following with intense interest the news accounts of the Vietnamese war refugees who have come to the United States and are struggling to establish themselves in American society.

I don't envy them, because 1, too, know what difficulty a person of Oriental descent faces in-trying to integrate himself into American life—even when he happens to be an American himself.

I happen to be such an American—born and raised in Salt Lake City by parents who also were born here. I attended public schools, watched Dizzy Dean and the "Game of the Week" on television, listened to the Limeliters and the Kingston Trio. Yet recently, after I made a speech to 300 people in a large Midwestern city, people came up to me and asked me where I'd learned to speak English so well. To them, because I'm a Japanese-American, I'm somehow foreign, suspicious, and not really a citizen of this land.

A Congressman's view

Almost all Japanese-Americans can relate incidents of some well-meaning person asking how they like it in "our" country. Even our leaders aren't immune. I once talked for over an hour with a Midwest Congressman about civil rights legislation. I explained why it was-important to Japanese-Americans because of our personal history and the tragedy of the internment camps in the 1940's. The Congressman's final words were: "Young man, if you can guarantee to me that your country will not bomb Pearl Harbor again, then I'll vote for your bill."

John J. Wilson, the Watergate lawyer for Robert Haldeman and John Ehrlichman, was heard over public television to refer to Sen. Daniel Inouye of Hawaii as a "little Jap." Since the Senator had lost his arm in defense of America in World War II, Wilson's attempt to justify the racial slur was even worse. Wilson said he wouldn't feel bad if someone called him a little American.

Feel strong ties

Few groups of U. S. citizens have been so closely associated with a foreign country as the Japanese-Americans are with Japan. As U. S. and Japanese relations go, so go the fortunes of these citizens. During World War II, this ethnic group suffered its worst humiliation. On Feb. 19, 1942, Executive Order 9066 directed that 110,000 Japanese Americans be removed to 10 inland relocation camps because it was feared they might attempt sabotage.

Germans and Italians were also enemies in World War II. However, these immigrants and their children were not interned or removed from "strategic" locations. Even a great civil libertarian like Earl Warren, then Attorney General of California, said in 1942: "We believe that when we are dealing with the Caucasian race we have methods that will test the loyalty of them, and we believe that we can, in dealing with the Germans and the Italians, arrive at some fairly sound conclusions because of our knowledge of the way they live in the community and have lived for many years. But when we deal with the Japanese we are in an entirely different field and we cannot form any opinion that we believe to be sound."

After the war a period of friendly relations began for the U. S. and Japan. Japanese-Americans profited from this. They put their education to work, worked extra hours and extra hard, sacrificed, and basically realized the American Dream. They "made it" economically. Edwin O. Reischauer, Harvard professor and former ambassador to Japan, calls the history of the second-generation Japanese - Americans the "Horatio Alger tale on an ethnic scale."

Racial stereotype

Their success story created a new problem. Many Japanese - Americans were pressured by being part of a model minority. The social cliché that all Asians are industrious, thrifty, self-sufficient, victimized the individual. Much more was expected of a Japanese-American because of this racial stereotype. When he produced only average work, he and others felt he had failed.

Growing economic competition between Japan and the U. S. and concern over environmental problems have caused new problems between Japan and the U. S. and, therefore, between Japanese-Americans and their fellow citizens Japanese have been investing recently in U. S. hotels and real estate. This has caused fear in some of a second economic "Pearl Harbor." What Americans fail to realize is that Canada and European ("white") countries have much larger investments in the U. S. than Japan.

In 1972, when the Japanese American Citizens League (JACL) held its national convention in Washington, D. C., Congressman Spark M. Matsunaga of Hawaii took 300 delegates on a tour of the city. They ran into a demonstration against foreign imports sponsored by one of the electrical unions. The union members looked at the Japanese-Americans and saw them as "Japs" from Japan who were taking away their jobs and displacing American electronic products with their low price exports.

Epithets on homes

Racial epithets have been scrawled on Japanese-American homes. This past year in California, a Japanese-American politician was called home in the middle of the campaign because police had found "Go back to Japan!" and "Dirty Jap" painted on his home. Although this highly respected public official was reelected, the incident shows that when people get intense,

Although Japanese-Americans were held in internment camps like this during World War II, no responsible charge of sabotage was ever made against them.

they often look at a person in a stereotypic manner.

Certain environmental groups are campaigning to save the whales, a campaign that Japanese-Americans support. The JACL has been on record with the State Department and the Japanese government in support of a 10-year moratorium on harvesting whales. The environmental movement has called for a boycott of Japanese imports because that nation continues to have a large whaling industry Often schoolchildren are so sympathetic to the Save the Whale movement that they take out their feelings on the first thing that appears Japanese. My own 3-year-old daughter was at a playground when a little girl came up and said, "You're bad." My daughter asked, "Why am I bad?" The child replied, "Because you kill whales."

A distinction

The half million Americans of Japanese ancestry do not want to be misidentified. America is the country of their birth and citizenship and Japan is the country of their ancestral heritage. Japanese-Americans are concerned that those two countries remain friendly. On the one hand they want to make certain there is a distinction made between Japanese-Americans and Japan and on the other hand they are very proud of their Japanese cultural heritage. It is troubling that the public at large too often fails to make this distinction.

The Japanese American Citizens League seeks to explain and solve these problems. A grassroots civil rights organization, JACL was organized in 1930 for Japanese-Americans to help each other. It now works through education and public service for civil rights of all minorities. In the 96 chapters throughout the country the 30,000 members are encouraged to participate in and serve the greater community.

Home and heritage

Interestingly, many of the values brought to the United States from Japan by the immigrants corresponded very closely to the Protestant ethic: value on family, value of the strength of education, value on religion, value on hard work. The Japanese culture encouraged many of the same things that had produced success in this country for a long time.

The Vietnamese who have come here also have a contribution to make to American society. Instead of fearing that they will take "our" jobs and weaken "our" culture—racist cries that have been raised against Orientals for generations—we should give them the chance to make good without prejudice or discrimination.

PAUL NEWMAN

All-Star Cast

At this year's Cannes Film Fes, tival where so many film deals are negotiated, Paul Blau who represents Francis Ford Coppola (who directed "The Godfather I and II") succeeded in raising more than $10 million for Coppola's newest production, tentatively entitled, "Apocalypse Now."

"Apocalypse," written by John Milius, is the story of the Vietnam war and its brutalizing effects on young Americans.

It is a shocking, horror story in which the script shows U.S. soldiers, high on dope, living with Vietnamese girls in a destroyed temple, treating the girls like cows.

The soldiers massacre the Vietcong, relish napalm attacks, become little more than animals themselves.

The background music is compounded of rock and Wagner; and in the last reel, the Americans direct their machine-gun fire on American helicopters because to them the war has reached a point where all its ingredients, foe and friend, represent evil.

Although only Steve McQueen has been signed for a starring role

MARLON BRANDO

to date, Coppola hopes to sign three other topflight stars from among Marlon Brando, Robert Redford, Paul Newman, Al Pacino and Gene Hackman.

Coppola would like about 85 helicopters and lots of other ordnance for the film. Whether the Defense Department will cooperate with him once Assistant Defense Secretary Joe Laitin reads the script is open to question. Whether it does or not, Coppola, riding high on the basis of his two immensely profitable "Godfathers," is determined to produce "Apocalypse Now." He has plenty of loot.

Grooming Habits Again

What right does an employer have to tell a female employee that she must shave her legs? Apparently he has a legal right if he's a restaurant owner and the employee is a waitress.

In Somers, Conn., Jerome Young, who runs an eatery, fired Judith Quist in 1974 because she refused to shave her legs. Young maintained that his customers had complained about the long hair on Judith Quist's legs.

Mrs. Quist refused to shave her legs, claiming that no such requirement was made of male employees.

The case went to a hearing ex aminer, Neil Atlas, who decided that proprietor Young had the right to impose grooming habits on his workers and that no laws supported Mrs. Quist's contention that she was being denied freedom of expression.

Early Sexist Chores

Jack, wash the dishes! Susan, cut the grass!

Only when children hear their parents give such orders will real equality between the sexes have been achieved, declares Mary Lynch of Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y.

After interviewing 806 school-age children for her masters thesis, Ms. Lynch discovered that children's chores are still tied to traditional sexist roles.

From 6 to 8, boys and girls share household chores evenly, but girls between 12 and 17 work about twice as hard as boys the same age. The girls' work is almost always "womanly," making beds, preparing meals, cleaning the house, while boys from age 10 on usually work in the yard or on cars and other machinery.

The most common form of physical unattractivenessthe protruding abdomen-is not caused by fat.

The incredible "TRIM-TRAIN" flattens stomach bulge regardless of diet.

Rehabilitation Specialist United States Army Department of Physical Medicine (Ret.)

A rehabilitation specialist has devised a fantastic invention tested at a leading university that turns "pushed-out" abdominal muscles into a flat, natural girdle of support. In as little as 2 minutes a day!

And no wonder you get discouraged so easily. Even when your diet melts off an impressive number of pounds, that ugly outward bulge at the waistline is still there. And even after you've jogged hundreds of miles, played countless games of tennis and been broken down by exercises more suited to a professional dubious exercise programs is most often a big sagging abdo-football player than a business man or housewife, you're still the embarrassed owner of an "abdominus prominus."

Let's face it. The sight in the mirror that sends hundreds

As a veteran United States Rehabilitation Specialist, I knew the answer for years. The protruding abdomen has very little to do with fat. It has everything to do with what doctors call "prolapsis"-a collapse of the muscular sheath reaching from the rib cage to the groin, which should be drum-tight and board-flat. Slumping at desks, slouching when walking, and child-bearing cause the once flat and powerful muscles to be pushed and stretched outward by the pressure of internal organs. You'd have your hideous abdominal bulge even if you didn't have an ounce of fat on you. And this is also a causative factor in low

From my years of re-conditioning men in the army, I knew the two finest abdominal tightening and flattening exercises to be the "sit-up" and the "leg raise." But there were problems with these exercises. First, they were so difficult to do that the average untrained man or woman would be hard-pressed to do more than 5 or 10 to begin with. And they would find it even more difficult to work up to the number of repetitions and the speed of performance needed to obtain real benefits. Also, the "leg raise" supplies most of its benefits to the lower abdomen. The "sit-up" does most of its good on the upper abdominals. A fully effective midsection flattener must tighten the abdominal sheath from rib-cage to groin as a single unit in

The answer to all these problems is my incredible, never-before-seen device called the TRIM-TRAIN.

The TRIM-TRAIN is actually a sturdy four-wheeled vehicle running in a five-foot track. You kneel on the comfortable, padded "train" and grasp a set of grips set in the track frame in front of you.

Now, following the short, easily understood instructions, you begin.

You choose the speed, the effort, and the number of repetitions to suit your strength and physical condition. The basic movement is a thrusting back and drawing forward of the knees riding the "train." By limiting speed, backward travel and repetitions, the most out-of-condition housewife can perform without discomfort. Your body provides natural resistance. By increasing the speed, backward travel and repetitions, you get a workout suitable for an olympic gymnast.

I know, because I sent my TRIM-TRAIN for scientific evaluations to a top professor at a famous university. The machine proved itself in carefully controlled scientific tests on subjects of various physical qualifications, including one world-class gymnast. The findings:

The TRIM-TRAIN brought subjects to its highest plateau of cardio-vascular-respiratory endurance in only two minutes. Between five and ten minutes of work on the TRIM-TRAIN are the maximum the machine requires of you, no matter what your physical condition. What a blessing for the time-pressed executive or housewife.

Compared with the stationary bicycle, rowing machine and shoulder wheel, the TRIM-TRAIN is far more flexible in adjusting both speed and resistance to your growing strength. So it's more likely to keep you from quitting from too much time and effort.

In the first couple of weeks you'll begin to see that prominence under your belt buckle beginning to deflate. You'll be positively amazed at the way your once-sagging, stretched and toneless abdominal muscles pick up strength. Strength that pushes your internal organs back where they belong, with an abdominal wall that's sheetiron flat. You will also note a definite improvement in general muscle tone and the endurance of all other muscles. This further helps contribute to good appear-

The amazing TRIM-TRAIN is sturdy but compact. It fits handily under a bed or at the bottom of a closet, and sets up in seconds. You can use it in the privacy of any

my favorite jokes

by rip taylor

EDITOR'S NOTE: Rip Taylor's first job as a U.S. Senate page and a subsequent degree in political science may well have prepared him for a career in comedy. Rip's appeared on the major TV shows, Carson, Douglas, Dean Martin, was a regular on the Phyllis Diller Show, and performs in top clubs. Though he wears a wig, he makes no secret of his baldness and has even gone so far as to form an organization called TUPE Troup-Toupees Underground for the Preservation of the Environment. TUPE's premise is based on research which concludes that air pollution causes baldness.

Offstage Rip is known for his gourmet cooking. "A gourmet," he says, "is somebody who complains about the cheese dip at a swinging party."

Here are some of Rip Taylor's jokes:

Yesterday was such a bad day. My twin sister forgot my birthday.

I just had a fascinating conversation. I was trying to explain what a shampoo is to Telly Savalas.

I give Kojak a lot of credit. He's the only man I know who keeps his hat on with a suction cup!

I'm fascinated by Beverly Hills. Where else can you buy a pocket calculator that comes with unlisted numbers?

Where else but in America can you watch a Bicentennial Minute sponsored by a Dutch oil company on a Japanese TV set.

Shrewd merchandising is when you charge 10 cents extra for cracked eggs—and call them "pre-broken."

I have a pair of brown and white shoes. The brown one fits great, but the white one pinches.

I never get lucky in restaurants. I opened my fortune cookie last night, and in it was the check for the guy next to me. I said, "Hey, Buddy, I got your check," and he said, "Thank's."

There's a new face cream for people over 40. It makes them look younger by giving them acne.

I have a psychotic owl that goes "Why? Why?"

Inflation: The price of silver has gone up, but the Lone Ranger still refuses to sell.

A budget is when your money has stretch marks.

A man died and nobody wanted to say a good word for him at his funeral. They couldn't even get the local clergymen to say anything good. So they sent to the next town for a clergyman and they said: "Would you please say something nice about this guy." The clergyman said: "His brother was worse!"

If at first you do succeed—it's probably your father's business.

We were so poor, in our neighborhood the rainbow was in black and white.

You may throw your aspirin away, once you've discovered...

ACUPRESSURE YOU USE YOUR FINGERS. INSTEAD OF NEEDLES.

You learn to press the right "buttons" on your body. And your body'll work miracles: To heal you! To relieve you! To relax you! (To make you feel and even look younger!)

It works a lot like Acupuncture. Only it's so simple, safe and easy. You learn in minutes what can bring you a lifetime of relief. Relief from pains, tension, and discomforts (from headaches to hayfever). To help you feel and look your best for the rest of your life!

Like aspirin, doctors don't know exactly how it works. All they know is that it can achieve miraculous results (but unlike aspirin which can have very harmful side effects. Acupressure is 100% safe). And now for no more than you probably spend in one trip to the drug store, you can learn how to do it. With results guaranteed. Or your money back.

If anybody told you that you could get rid of a big headache for example simply by massaging a pressure point in a special way, you would say they were crazy. Yet it really works! And that's only the beginning.

The human body is the most fabulous machine of all. Built into it are wondrous healing mechanisms which man has never been able to duplicate in the laboratory. For reasons not yet completely understood, Acupressure (in a way very similar to its cousin, Acupuncture) seems to be a way to "trigger" these miraculous healing mechanisms; and bring soothing relief as the healing process takes over, doing those things for the body which only the body can do for itself.

The new healing method that's thousands of years old. For thousands of years Chinese medical experts have understood pressure point healing (Acupressure) and practiced it with great success. Now at last, the western world has recognized this science for the fantastic results it has achieved. Today more and more doctors and nurses are learning the therapy of pressure points. But you don't need a medical education to practice it. Now there is an amazing course so simply written and illustrated that anybody can begin mastering Acupressure within minutes.

No drugs. No special equipment. Acupressure may bring safe relief from pain. You can perform it anytime you wish. Without drugs and without special equipment of any kind. All you need is a little knowledge and a couple of fingers. And soon, you may be enjoying a whole new life of health and vigor you wouldn't have dreamed possible!

Even when you're not in pain. Even when Even when you're not in pain. Even when you're not in pain, it can be a great help to relieve tension and simply to relax. To put your whole body at ease (even get you to GIVE YOUR FACE AN ACU-PRESSURE TREATMENT EVERY MORNING. IT COULD DO A LOT MORE FOR YOUR LOOKS THAN ALL THE EXPENSIVE COSMET-ICS AND FACIALS PUT TO-GETHER! Push the right buttons and your body releases power-hormones that help keep skin soft and smooth, and revitalize tissue to keep the flesh firm and young feeling; without the sagging and puffiness that are always associated with aging. When it comes to looking and feeling great, no drug or cosmetic yet invented can compete with the "magic" of your own body chemistry once you've learned to activate it!

Don't confuse Acupressure with ordinary massage methods. Acupressure is a serious help in healing. Here are some of the many conditions where Acupressure may prove a real God-send to you:

Arthritis, Backaches, Headaches (even migraine), Sinus, Hayfever, Asthma, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, Constipation, Gallbladder, Gastro-Intestinal and Abdominal Problems, Infections, Insomnia, Rheumatism, Neuritis, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Joint Pains, Varicose Veins and Leg Cramps, Fatigue, Depression, Diarrhea, Hiccups, Blood Pressure, Nervousness.

We'll mail you the complete illustrated Acupressure course at absolutely no risk to you. (In words and pictures, it's so beautifully simple even a child could understand it). ### Good Earth AUMANAC

AMERICA, BELIEVE IT OR NOT, is a land of many exotic wild birds and animals—creatures which have been imported from foreign lands. The oneasant, the pigeon and even the starling are in this group. They run the gamut from good guys to bad guys.

One of the most common exotics is the English sparrow. Introduced into this country about 100 years ago, this small bird which reputedly was death to bugs and insects, has almost literally

Another exotic, which can sometimes be a pest, is the German carp. This fish can be found in waters over all of North America. And while it makes for good fishing, it can so crowd waters that other fish will be killed off.

o, this small bind The Gypsy moth, introduced in 1869 as eath to bugs and incts, has almost literally try, has recently turned into a forester's taken over many nightmars. It is estimated that the Gypsy suburban and rural moth has caused the defoliation of more areas, and has become than 2 million acres of hardwood and evergreen trees a year. As in the case of many exotics, there are no natural predators to control the Gypsy moth.

An exotic that may cause problems

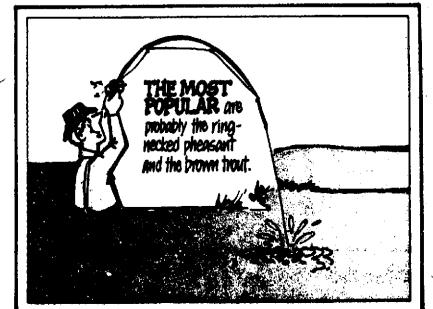

An exotic that may cause problems for North America is the monk parakeet: a bird commonly sold as a cage parakeet. It can, however, survive in the wild, and is extremely destructive to grain crops in its native South America.

We must always plan and do research before introducing new animal and plant species to North America.
